ASK CONGRESS FOR STRONG BEER

Today

Beer? No. Sales Tax? Yes
A. P. Sloan's New Idea
Yellow Paper and Green
One Big Railroad

—By Arthur Brisbane—

THE EFFORT TO TAKE prohibition out of the Constitution and get beer for you and hundreds of millions in beer taxes for Uncle Sam fell flat.

But if you are interested in national finance you will be glad to hear that the sales tax is coming, also a cut in extravagant government expenditures.

President Hoover in his annual message demands both.

There is no doubt that the sales tax will do more to balance the budget and put Uncle Sam back on his financial feet than anything else, beer included.

The bootleggers will be delighted to hear that the proposition, if beer comes, is to make it 2.75 beer. For the working men, who are the natural consumers of beer, that would be only "near beer," in the sense that it is nearer to water than to real beer.

There is no doubt that General Motors and Fisher Brothers, automobile body builders, have a new idea that will command attention all over the world.

Mr. Alfred P. Sloan, president of General Motors, invited this writer yesterday afternoon to test the working of the new idea in a 1933 Buick, driving 50 miles an hour across the new George Washington Bridge over the Hudson river. With the wind blowing through the Palisades from the north, or up from the ocean through the Narrows, that is as windy a spot as you will find east of the Rockies.

Mr. H. J. C. Henderson, of "Fisher Bodies," drove the car, with the learned Mr. Berkowitz sitting beside him, while Mr. Sloan, on the back seat, demonstrated what is beyond question a highly important engineering development.

Briefly, an arrangement of draught control in the four front and rear windows of the car makes it possible to manage circulation of air absolutely, doing away with "back draughts" that start millions of colds, especially in older people, by chilling the back of the neck.

Doctors will be interested in this development for their patients' sake. The common cold is the cause and beginning of innumerable fatal illnesses, and Mr. Sloan's "draught control" will work wonders for health. Life insurance companies could well afford to make him a present of twenty million dollars.

Mr. Sloan informs you that this new device will be part of every 1933 General Motors car.

This government owes and has outstanding interest bearing obligations amounting to more than TWENTY THOUSAND MILLION DOLLARS and costing the people in interest charges nearly one thousand million dollars a year.

Has our present depression anything to do with that gigantic "freezing" of funds?

Suppose, only SUPPOSE, that the government should thaw out some of that frozen money?

Suppose the government should call in for payment ten billions of the bonds to start with, and pay for them with ten billions nice new money?

You could not call that inflation, because the government's indebtedness would not be increased. It would owe ten billions for new green money bearing no interest, instead of owing ten billions for yellow bonds paying interest. Taxpayers would save four hundred million dollars a year.

And those that receive perfectly good cash for their bonds would have to invest the ten billions in some other way.

Would that investing of ten billions help the depression? Would it improve values? The writer doesn't know, he merely ASKS.

But he DOES know this, that government indebtedness would not be increased, and therefore its credit could not be damaged. It would owe ten billions on green paper paying no interest, instead of owing ten billions on yellow paper costing in interest four hundred million dollars a year. If that be inflation, make the most of it.

The Union Pacific Railroad, built up by the late E. H. Harriman, largely owned by his heirs, is said to have bought 100,000 shares of Pennsylvania Railroad stock, recently, thus becoming the biggest individual owner of the Pennsylvania stock.

That step in the direction of railroad merger by stock purchase will interest railroadmen and shippers.

There ought to be one big railroad company in the United States, just as there is one great postoffice, owned by the government, with just compensation to the private owners. That probably would suit many of them, just now, in the era of no dividends.

Failing that, the best thing would be to have the fewest possible competing railroads, with as little unnecessary overhead as possible, the people, of course, regulating rates.

BODIES OF 7 DROWNED MEN RECOVERED

St. John's, N. F., Dec. 7 (AP)—The bodies of seven of the 12 men who perished in the wreck of the steamer Sand Beach have been found. The bodies of Capt. B. M. Moody and Andrew Berg were identified.

BORAH ASKS HOME LOAN BANK BILL REPEAL

Washington, Dec. 7 (AP)—A bill to repeal the home loan bank act and abolish the system created at the last session of Congress for liberalizing home mortgage conditions was introduced today by Senator Borah. He contended the act had proved "wholly unsatisfactory."

MABEY DEFENSE FIGHT OPENS

The defense of Herbert S. Mabey, one of three men on trial in the so-called Medford Trust Co. stock conspiracy, opened today in Middlesex superior court, after the defense of Harry R. and Samuel Coshnear, brothers, had closed.

All three defendants are charged with conspiracy to steal and conspiracy to defraud in connection with the sale of stock in the bank, now closed.

The government alleges that the stock was "boosted" over the radio and in letters to the public and that the price, by those methods and through "wash sales" was forced up in some instances until the trio received double what it could have been bought for in the open market.

FIND LYNN BABY SUFFOCATED

Little Patricia Montague, 10-month-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Montague of 49 Eutaw ave., Lynn, was found smothered to death in her crib today when the mother went to the crib with a nursing bottle.

Mrs. Montague's efforts to arouse the infant were unsuccessful and she telephoned police and Dr. Richard W. Allison.

Patrolmen Kane and Kerizan, with the physician, worked over the baby for half an hour without success.

New York, Dec. 7 (INS) Fritz Kreisler, violinist, Gilbert Miller, theatrical producer, and Charles Laughton, English actor, were among the passengers sailing for Europe today.

Long Asks Tobacco and Bottled Drinks Tax

A 7 per cent tax on gross receipts from sales of all bottled beverages and tobacco to raise sufficient revenue to finance the old age assistance act, and the abolition of the present head tax of $1 for the same purpose, was proposed today by Tax Commissioner Long in a report to the Legislature.

If this tax should not prove sufficient, Long recommended that a 7 per cent tax be placed on admission prices to all amusements.

Long estimates the beverage and tobacco tax alone would bring in about $6,000,000 a year. In his report, he said he did not believe a sales tax could be levied successfully here, and even if it did, he expressed doubts that it would yield as much as his proposed excise taxes.

Long pointed out that 16,641 persons received old age assistance last year at a cost to the state of $5,212,764.

Last year, Long recommended a flat tax on bottled goods and tobacco which called for the issuance of tax stamps.

This plan was rejected by the Legislature as a nuisance. The plan Long reports now at the instruction of the Legislature would provide that special licenses be issued to all beverage and tobacco sellers, and that the tax be levied on the amount of business done.

Killing Bares Old Wedding

GIBSON GIRL'S FATHER IS BLAMED

Draws Defense Fire as the Honor Case Nears Jury

By DOROTHY DUCAS

New City, N. Y., Dec. 7 (INS)—Robert Gibson, father of the society girl for whose seduction Sidney Herbert Homewood, riding master, is on trial here, has made his daughter the victim of his pride, Homewood's lawyer charged today.

"If anyone should be prosecuted it should be Mr. Gibson, who forced her to be crucified on the cross of his pride by dragging her through the muck and mire and publicity of this trial!" said Robert Finkelstein, summing up the defense's case.

"They could not make Sidney marry her, so they brought action against him. I can't see how it can do them any good. Since they can't have a name for the expected child, they want to brand it as the son of a convict!"

PROBLEM IN MORALS

"It resolves itself to this:

"Was Charlotte Gibson a member of the present age and generation or was she as prim, Victorian, sedate and obedient as she claims?" he went on.

"Is it possible for a girl so intelligent to be so unintelligent about sexual matters?"

With this sentiment the defense summation closed, and District Attorney Henry V. Stebbins began summing up for the State.

He began with a warning that "if any group of men in Rockland County can call evil good and good evil, then the fabric of society is breaking down and our people are in danger."

INSULT TO INTELLIGENCE

Concerning Homewood's testimony that Charlotte pursued him, the district attorney said:

"It is an insult to the intelligence of any man, an account of a courtship such as that."

Wagerers are offering 2 to 1 that the riding master will be convicted and even money that Homewood will not spend a single day behind prison bars.

In spite of the impassioned pleas of attorneys, a parade of witness gleaned from the ranks of both families, legal restrictions pointed

GIRL HID HER SECRET FROM WANDERWELL

Bride of Indian Chief on Fatal Vagabond Cruise as Single

Mary Parks the Saugus girl enmeshed with 15 other adventurers in the baffling California yacht murder of Capt. Walter Wanderwell was a married woman concealing a broken romance in order to make the projected vagabond world cruise with the slain soldier of fortune the Boston Evening American learned today.

The disclosure added a new baffling phase to the crime at Long Beach, Cal., characterized by authorities as "a wide open mystery."

The girl who called herself Miss Parks and is the daughter of Frank Parks, of 8 Richards st., East Saugus, and one of the most important witnesses in the case, was in reality Mrs. Donatierie Juan Muntoine Grey Elk, estranged wife of an American Indian many years her senior, authorities learned.

She was married to Grey Elk by Rev. Joseph F. Bracken of St. Marguerite's Church, Saugus, on September 19, 1927, and separated from him shortly afterwards in New York, it was disclosed.

IDENTITY A MYSTERY

Authorities were puzzled by the exact identity of her husband, whose existence she is believed to have concealed because Capt. Wanderwell had decreed no married women except his own wife and the wife of his yacht engineer could make the voyage.

Grey Elk gave his age at 43 at the time of marriage and his residence as Washington, D. C. He is said to be a cousin of White Elk, a vaudeville star, and his present whereabouts are unknown.

New York, Dec. 7 (INS)—Recall of U. S. Consul-Gen. George S. Messersmith at Berlin because of "his ignorance" in handling the passport visa of Dr. Albert Einstein, scientist, was demanded today by a group of prominent women.

Messersmith was accused for "ignorance" in a resolution adopted at a meeting at the home of Mrs. Gerard Swope, wife of the president of the General Electric Company.

"By his treatment of the distinguished scientist," the resolution declared, "Messersmith has humiliated America and made it a laughing stock second only to the Scope trial in Tennessee."

Chicago Boy Slayer to Be Tried Monday

FIVE YEARS FOR CRASH DRIVER

George F. Heuser, 22, of Neponset ave., Roslindale, operator of an automobile involved in a crash outside Cardinal O'Connell's home on Commonwealth ave., on May 11, in which three persons were burned to death, was sentenced to five years and a day in Concord Reformatory today at Suffolk Superior court.

Heuser was going on trial for the second time on a triple charge of manslaughter, when he arose and stated he wished to plead guilty.

Asst. Dist.-Atty. William J. Sullivan agreed to the plea and Judge Harold P. Williams imposed sentence. Heuser was also fined $100 on a charge of operating so as to endanger the lives of the public.

Heuser was found guilty on the latter charge at a previous trial but the jury disagreed on the manslaughter charges.

Atty. Fred Pollard and his wife Frances, of Newton, and Thomas McCaffery, of South Boston, were burned to death in the crash. Heuser and two South Boston girls who were riding with him escaped injury.

Workers' Beer Clubs Proposed to Ely

A plan to substitute the old-time saloon with workingmen's clubs where beer could be served and chartered by the state was proposed to Gov. Ely's liquor law commission today by Charles S. Rackemann, member of the Constitutional Liberty League.

Declaring that the Massachusetts laws for control of liquor as they existed before Prohibition were the best ever devised, he is opposed to the formation of a liquor commission to handle the traffic in the event the 18th Amendment is repealed.

"I am opposed to the State following the Canadian commission plan, or any other foreign plan," he said. "A few minor amendments in laws still on the books, with their provisions for local option, would adequately take care of the liquor question."

4 P. C. BEER IS URGED BY BREWERS

Say It Would Put 300,000 to Work; Over 30 Million Revenue

Washington, Dec. 7 (AP)—Witnesses for brewers depicted beer as a bringer of good tidings for business and the federal treasury, in the opening of testimony before the House ways and means committee today on the Collier bill.

Advocating a brew of four per cent alcohol by volume, Levi Cooke of Washington and R. A. Huber of St. Louis—on behalf of the United States Brewers Association—estimated a $5 a barrel tax would enrich the treasury of $330,945,000 a year.

Addressing the committee, but turning now and again to the crowded audience, Huber said the beer he supported could be sold for nine cents a bottle, and that its legalization would cause $360,000,000 to be sent to rehabilitate breweries and 300,000 men would be given work.

With the present brewing capacity in the country at 15,000,000 barrels annually, he said, a 40,000,000 barrel capacity would be needed before long.

3.2 PER CENT BETTER

Following Cooke's testimony that the 2.75 per cent beer by weight provided in the bill placed before the committee by Chairman Collier was insufficient in alcoholic content, Huber said a 3.2 per cent beer was a better product. The latter would be 4 per cent by volume.

Huber said millions would have to be expended immediately for materials such as barley, rice, sugar, syrup and other ingredients for production in the plants.

In addition to the 300,000 men he estimated would be given employment, he said many other workers, including coal miners and railroad employes, would be given increased employment.

The $5 a barrel tax proposed in the Collier bill was "reasonable." Huber said, if states and cities did not place an additional tax on it, so that it would become so costly it could not be purchased by laborers.

MINIMIZE NOT SOLVE

Asked by Rep. Crowther (R., N. Y.) if by legalizing beer, bootlegging would be eliminated, Huber said:

"I believe it won't except to the degree of consumption other sorts of liquors are reduced by those drinking beer.

"I don't think anything but a miracle would stop bootlegging,

HOOVER CUTS VETERANS' AID $127,000,000 IN BUDGET

PRESIDENT ASKS FOR LARGE SUM TO ENFORCE DRY LAW

Washington, Dec. 7 (INS)—A general manufacturers' sales tax of 2¼ per cent on everything except food was recommended to Congress today by President Hoover in transmitting a budget that calls for expenditures of $4,218,808,344 during the next fiscal year.

The President reported the new budget carries net estimates of $580,000,000 below those for the current fiscal year, but even this enormous reduction, he pointed out, is insufficient to meet the still more enormous deficit, which is expected to be well over a billion dollars by June.

In addition to the sales tax, which he estimated would produce $355,000,000, the President proposed continuing for another year the federal gasoline tax, which he calculated would bring in $137,000,000.

CUTS VETS ALLOWANCE

Mr. Hoover proposed to attain his $580,000,000 reduction in expenditures by:

Reducing veterans' allowances by $127,000,000.

Authorizing now new federal construction at this time.

Discontinuing federal road aid to the states.

Reducing all government salaries (civilian) by 11 per cent, above the $1000 class.

Continuing the administrative economy measures adopted last session.

Drastic retrenchment in all departmental and bureau expenditures.

Disability allowance to veterans of the World War, based on injuries or diseases not of service connection would be discontinued under President Hoover's budget except in cases of total and permanent disability.

DISABLED VETS' PAY

Allowances, compensation, retirement pay, pension, hospitalization or domiciliary care would be denied to veterans with incomes of $1500 or more if single and $3500 or over if married excepting those who were injured or contracted disease in line of duty, or those who were in actual contact with armed forces of the enemy in any war in which the United States participated.

The disability allowance provision of the World War veterans act of 1924 was written into the law to take care of permanently and totally disabled veterans, whose injuries or disease was not of service connection and in those of a lesser degree of disability classed as border line cases where doubt existed as to the cause for disability. To draw disability allowance the veteran must be at least 25 per cent permanently disabled under the present law. The maximum award is $48 a month, as approved by the president.

NO MENTION OF BEER

Neither in his annual message yesterday nor in his budget message today did the President mention prohibition or beer, and this lent credence to the theory that he would veto a beer bill if the lame duck session passes one.

At the same time, he recommended appropriating $9,599,948 for enforcing prohibition besides $26,664,651 for the coast guard, part of which is devoted to catching rum runners.

It is quite probable there will be a fight on this issue in Congress, for some members favor killing prohibition outright by refusing appropriations for enforcement.

The President warned of financial disaster unless prompt action is taken to bring the government's income up to somewhere near its out-go.

BIG DEBT INCREASE

Even with new revenues and drastic retrenchment, the public debt will be greatly increased this year, he said.

Economies recommended to be continued include: Furlough and pay reductions, suspension of automatic promotion in federal service, reductions in retired pay, travel allowance, overtime pay, shifting of employes, reduction of vocational education appropriations and reduction of fees for jurors and witnesses.

As for further government building, the President said:

"No provision is made for additional projects in the budget. I do not deem further building at this time in the public interest."

ARMY, NAVY SLASH

For national defense, he recommended $586,447,000, a reduction of $46,019,000.

The War Department is allotted $276,863,201, with 12,000 officers and 118,000 enlisted men.

New naval construction is estimated at $38,845,000.

Other reductions range from $131,000 for the Labor Department, to $201,000,000 for agriculture. Most of the latter is accounted for by discontinuing road aid to the states.

Highlights in Last Hoover Budget

Washington, Dec. 7 (AP)—President Hoover's final budget message today warned Congress it must watch the nation's purse strings and recommended that it:

Enact a sales tax of 2¼ per cent.

Retain for another year the 1-cent gasoline tax.

Cut government salaries 11 per cent and in addition continue the present 8 1-3 per cent cut under the furlough plan.

Restrict benefits to veterans by $127,000,000.

Make appropriations of $4,218,808,311.

Mr. Hoover also predicted a deficit of $1,146,478,307 for the present fiscal year, and estimated a deficit of $307,000,000 next year unless the additional tax program and economy project are adopted.

He did not mention war debts.

HERRIOT WAITS ON DEBT STAND

Paris, Dec. 7 (AP)—Premier Herriot said today that he will make no decision regarding the French policy on the money owed the United States until after he has talked tomorrow with Prime Minister MacDonald of Great Britain.

The two premiers will await the arrival of Neville Chamberlain, British chancellor of the exchequer.

The premier attended a cabinet meeting this morning and it was understood that the ministers had examined several alternatives—payment of the American debt installment this month without reservation, payment with reservation, payment in bonds, consignment of the amount due to the World Bank or the Bank of France and arbitration which would cover all possible solutions from payment to refusal to pay.

Repeal Win 333 to 83 If Lame Ducks Were Out

Washington, Dec. 7 (INS)—The Garner prohibition repeal resolution would have carried the House on Monday by a vote of 333 to 83 if the elected successors of the dry "lame ducks" had taken office, a survey disclosed today.

A repeal resolution thus is assured of passage in the next House by an overwhelming vote, unless many of the professed wets are converted by the drys.

The Garner resolution was opposed by 81 "lame ducks," or members not re-elected. Their successors do not take office until the new Congress is sworn in on the day of Gov. Roosevelt's inauguration March 4.

While the Garner resolution submitting repeal to the states was supported by 69 "lame ducks," the records disclosed that all of these will be succeeded in the next Congress by wets.

Of the 81 voting dry, 61 will be succeeded by members who have declared they will support the Democratic platform for outright repeal or are Republicans favoring repeal.

Thirteen of the "lame ducks" will be succeeded by drys, while the successors to seven failed to make their position clear during the campaign and thus are listed as drys.

The wets say that if a special session is called by Gov. Roosevelt, the repeal resolution will sail through the House by a record vote.

The drys, however, plan to make a drive to convert wets into drys, especially Southern Democrats whose personal desire is to vote dry but who supported the Garner resolution because of the pledge in the Democratic platform.

REISMAN FACES KANSAS TRIAL

Announcement of his intention to hold Max Reisman of Dorchester, for removal to Kansas to stand trial on charges of sale and transportation of allegedly poisonous jamaica ginger, was made today in Federal court by U. S. Commissioner Edwin C. Jenney.

The commissioner said he will file a memorandum with his reasons for the finding, in order to allow counsel for Reisman to proceed with filing of a writ of habeas corpus in Federal court to block the removal.

Jamaica ginger shipments in the case, the commissioner found, were made to Kansas by the Hub Products Co., a Massachusetts corporation, but there was no evidence presented to show Reisman to be an officer or stockholder.

"I do find," said Commissioner Jenney, "that Reisman had a business connection with the company and had a representative or agent in that state."

TREADWAY WILL FIGHT FOR DEBT

Washington, Dec. 7 (AP)—In the first congressional debate on war debts this session, Treadway (R., Mass.), said today in the House that "there has never been any intention on the part of the Congress, other than the moratorium of last year, that there should be any change or modification of these agreements."

"I have invariably stated," he said, "that I believed the settlements arrived at by the debt commission were both fair and generous to the various nations.

"Therefore, I for one am ready to go to the mat on the settlements as made by the debt funding commission."

Washington, D. C.:

I am a citizen in your district and I herewith protest your vote against repeal. The vote in your district at the recent election was overwhelmingly for repeal.

Your vote lines you up definitely as voting to prolong the depression, increase the tax load upon the people, and as deliberately ignoring the will of the majority in your district.

As a "lame duck," you have missed your opportunity to redeem yourself in the eyes of your constituents by carrying out the wishes of the majority of the people you are supposed to represent.

FREE-FOR-ALL FIST FIGHT IN REICHSTAG

Spectators Start Rioting When Hindenburg Is Attacked

Berlin, Dec. 7 (INS)—Meeting to vote on a Communist non-confidence motion against Gen. Kurt von Schleicher's government, the Reichstag broke up in a turmoil today with political partisans fighting in the galleries and on the floor of the chamber.

The battle started in the spectators' gallery shortly after President Hermann Wilhelm Goering called the session to order.

The cause of the fracas was a statement by Ernst Schneller, a Communist deputy, charging President Von Hindenburg was a "shameless exploiter of the labor class."

Nazis and Communists began arguing in the gallery and words gave way to blows. Communist deputies rushed to aid their constituents.

Goering ordered the galleries cleared. Before officers had time to carry out the command, Nazi storm troops rushed to aid the outnumbered Nazis.

A general melee followed, in which several Reichstag ushers were injured.

HOOVER NAMES 43 TO POSTS

Washington, Dec. 7 (AP)—President Hoover today sent to the Senate a list of 43 recess appointments and three reappointments.

Included in the list were the names of Roy D. Chapin as secretary of commerce; F. Lammot Belin, as ambassador to Poland; former Rep. Charles R. Crisp, Democrat, of Georgia, as a member of the tariff commission, and Atlee Pomerne and Charles A. Miller, chairman of the board and president, respectively, of the Reconstruction Corporation.

The names submitted for reappointment were those of Ernest I. Lewis, as an Interstate Commerce commissioner; G. Wallace W. Hanger, as a member of the board of mediation, and Samuel Purvis of Georgia to be United States marshal for the middle district of Georgia.

The President renewed the nominations of Judge Kenneth MacIntosh of Washington to the Federal Ninth Circuit Court, and of George E. Q. Johnson to be U. S. district judge for northern Illinois.

Council Holds Up 3 Ely Choices

The Governor's Council today confirmed Bennett V. McLaughlin of Holbrook, as register of probate and insolvency for Norfolk County to fill the unexpired term of Thomas B. Nash, deceased.

The council held over for a week action on appointments of David T. Montague as chairman of the Boston Licensing Board; James Farrell of Brighton as member of the Public Utilities board and of Gerald A. Healey of Brookline, as justice of Norfolk, southern district.

National Shawmut to Open 2 Branches

Two new branches of the National Shawmut Bank of Boston will be opened shortly after the first of the year, it was announced today, following receipt of authorization from the comptroller of currency.

50,000 VICTIMS OF JAP OUTRAGE, CHINA CHARGES

Formal London Letter Bares Atrocities in Manchuria

EDITOR'S NOTE—As a result of the exclusive dispatches from Edward Hunter, International News Service correspondent in Manchuria, confirming the massacre of 2700 Chinese peasants by Japanese troops near Fushun, the eyes of the world have been turned again toward Manchuria. The latest development came today in London, where the Chinese legation came forward with the charge that 50,000 Chinese civilians have been victims of Japanese atrocities in Manchuria since the seizure of Mukden.

International News Service Correspondent.

London, Dec. 7—The startling allegation that 50,000 Chinese civilians have been made victims of Japanese atrocities in various parts of Manchuria during the past year was made today by the Chinese legation in London.

Citing communications from Gen. Ma Chan-Shan, Manchurian military commander, who was reported killed last July, but who now appears to have escaped death, as well as evidence from other Chinese sources, Su Le Chang, of the legation staff, made his charges in a formal letter.

"According to a message from Gen. Ma Chan-Shan," the letter said, "no less than 50,000 civilians have been the victims of Japanese atrocities in districts of Manchuria where Chinese volunteers have operated.

"In the words of the general: 'It is a human tragedy unprecedented in the history of the world.'

"With regard to the merciless slaughtering of 2700 peasants in the Fushun district, the Chinese government is in possession of irrefutable evidence, duly sworn and signed by refugee officers who escaped from the scene of the massacre.

"These are also reports from neutral individuals who were sent to investigate by organizations whose impartiality admits of no question. It is also known that an American mission at Tsien-Ching-Sai protested to the Japanese authorities, purely for reasons of humanity."

BREWERS WANT BEER WITH KICK

until all sorts of liquors are legalized.

"We don't claim beer is a panacea. It's not going to solve the bootleg problem, and it is not going to solve the unemployment problem, and it is not going to solve the farm relief problem, but it will minimize them to some degree."

Standing before the committee, of which he is chairman, Rep. Collier of Mississippi started proceedings with the statement that the proposed alcoholic content of 2.75 per cent for beer and the tax of $5 a barrel of 31 gallons were "not arbitrary."

"The committee will decide," he said.

The first witness, Rep. Sabath (D. Ill.) urged the committee "to write the right kind of a bill," and do it quickly.

WOMEN IN AUDIENCE

So great was interest that a number of congressmen not on the committee sat behind the large semi-circular mahogany table facing the audience.

Most of the spectators were men, but there was a fair represenation of women in the audience.

Cooke went into different phases of the measure, noting it means Congress will withdraw from the field of regulation over beer, ale, porter, not containing more than the prescribed alcoholic content.

Claudia Muzio, Great Insull Admirer, Sails From Boston

She "just adores" Samuel Insull, does Claudia Muzio, and she wishes she could see him again.

Unlike Mary Garden, her co-star in the late lamented Chicago Civic Opera Co., for which Insull was once the "angel," the dynamic Claudia bears no resentment against the former Chicago public utilities magnate who is battling extradition in Greece.

She revealed this today just before sailing from Boston on the Saturnia of the Cosulich Line for Italy, and she also spoke her regret that she will not be able to sing in Boston this year.

"I am going to miss my stay in Boston this year," she said. "I always enjoyed it so much. However, I hope to be here again next year."

Muzio finished an extensive concert tour before sailing to keep engagements in Italy. She will return in the spring.

Almost 1000 passengers sailed on the Saturnia for Mediterranean ports, of whom 250 were from Boston. Included in the list were Mr. and Mrs. Charles Collens, Mrs. George Lee, Mrs. Guy Currier and Mrs. Frederick Appleton Sailing with Signora Muzio was her mother, Mrs. Giovanni Muzio. Other members of the Civic Opera company were Maestro Roberto Moranzoni, Virgilio Lazzari and Renato Liberati. The literary world was represented by Kenneth Roberts, former Boston newspaperman, and his wife.

Lupe's Through With Men, But Tarzan—ah!

Hollywood, Cal., Dec. 7 (AP)—Lupe Velez, the little Mexican actress who captivated Broadway for a season as a member of the Follies, apparently wasn't so serious recently when she said she was through with men. She has renewed her friendship with Johnny Weissmuller, champion swimmer, recently turned film actor.

Lupe Velez

Lupe and Weissmuller were together at last night's boxing program which featured Mickey Walker and Arthur De Kuh. The irrepressible Lupe gave Johnny quite a beating as she sat at ringside and shadow boxed wildly in an attempt to stir Walker to greater action. Walker won by a knockout in the first round.

Einstein Ready to Start U. S. Trip Saturday

Berlin, Dec. 7—Professor Albert Einstein has received his passport visa from the U. S. Consulate, and as Frau Einstein began packing for their departure next Saturday, he laughingly dismissed Monday's incident at the Consulate with:

Prof. Einstein

"Well, that's all dead and gone. Let it go at that."

The scientist stalked from the consulate while being questioned, as all visa applicants are, about his political views. The American Women's Patriot Corporation had protested his visit. The Einsteins have booked stateroom and bath aboard the steamer Oakland which reaches Los Angeles January 8.

Amy Johnson Plans Return Hop to London

Cape Town, South Africa, Dec. 7—Amy Johnson, girl flier, revealed today that she will fly from here to England next Sunday morning in an attempt to break the record of 4 days, 6 hours and 55 minutes, which she recently established when she completed her flight from England to the Cape. She plans on making only four stops on the new flight.

Amy Johnson

When she leaves here her first stop, she says, will be Mossamedes, Portuguese West Africa, a distance of 1350 miles. She will continue on from there to Duala, Cameroons, a 1300-mile hop. From there to Gao in French Africa, a distance of 1050 miles, and from there to Oran on the Algerian coast. From Oran she plans a 1275 miles hop to London.

Waters Opposes Plan For New Bonus Army

Pittsburgh, Dec. 7—Walter W. Waters, leader of the first bonus army expedition, had urged discontinuance of the latest march on the nation's capital now under way by two contingents of the revived bonus army.

Walter W. Waters

Citing lack of public sympathy with the new march a message of disapproval was received here from Waters. It said:

"While I understand conditions, still cannot approve of march as public instead of being in sympathy is positively opposed. Without favorable public opinion movement absolutely hopeless and can result only in added hardship and possible trouble for participants. I advise discontinuance."

PARTED BY TRAGEDY

Capt. Walter Wanderwell lived up to his name, traveling far and wide throughout the world until death at the hand of a killer overtook him at Long Beach, Cal. The captain is shown here with his wife and two children, Niles and Nell. He was planning a globe girdling voyage when slain.

SISTER OF GIRL

Miss Anne Parks, sister of the girl detained for a time in the killing of Capt. Wanderwell at Long Beach, related to the Boston Evening American last night the story of the life of her sister.

Mother Linked in Mystery Killing Bares Secret Cruise Order

By RUTH MUGGLEBEE

An unusual order prevented passengers of Capt. Walter Wanderwell's round-the-world cruise from making records of the trip for themselves.

Miss Mary M. Parks, of Richards st., East Saugus, secretary to the murdered world adventurer and soldier of fortune, held and later released at Long Beach, Cal., as a material witness in his slaying, revealed this mysterious order in a letter she sent to her sister Anne.

The letter was written from Long Beach and received by Miss Anne Katherine Parks last Monday—two days ago. It requested the sister to make a scrap book and watch the newspapers for clippings of the trip.

The letter written on both sides of two long sheets of plain white paper, revealed not only the slain man's instructions but expressed the girl's keen joy and feverish excitement over the prospects of the trip. When the trip was over, the secretary held high hopes of becoming a prominent and important person.

"I have always wanted to travel," the letter stated. "Now is my great opportunity without having to pay for it. Isn't that wonderful? It will be an education for me and a good experience and after all it seems to be part of my life to seek new things."

"Now, Anne, I am talking to you particularly, I want you to keep a scrap book for me, keeping an account of all my experiences and all my pictures and all my letters that I will write to you from every port at which we stop. I am asking you to do this because we are not supposed to keep any records or scrapbooks on board because the people who are running the cruise fear that we may use them for commercial

GIRLS ORDERED TO PUT MORE CLOTHES ON

18 Acts Are Made to Change Costumes and Dialogues

Debate has broken out afresh between theater men and censors of Sunday shows in Boston. It became known today, with the first attack on the censors launched through Variety, show business weekly.

What is considered proper as to dress and manners on the stage on week days in Boston is taboo on Sundays under new and ever-tightening restrictions, it is declared, and Boston has become practically "a No. 2 Philadelphia on Sundays."

"In recent weeks the lid has clamped down on everything but mammy songs and bows," the complainants assert. "Since the retirement of John M. Casey this town's noted censor, the weekly censorship list issued over the signature of Commissioner A. F. Foote has grown considerably."

DEBS MADE TO CLOTHE

Variety cites that even debutantes in an act were ordered to don more clothing for Sunday, although on week days the scantier garb was considered sufficient. Eighteen acts were censored and slashed in one week for Sunday showing, while five other acts allowed to show on week days were banned altogether on the Sabbath.

"Right now, the acts declare, they're too tame for even Sunday school concerts," asserts Variety.

According to Variety, the 18 censored acts and the eliminations or changes ordered were:

Al Mamaux—word 'hell.'

Arthur Ward—all dancing.

SPANISH PRISON SWINDLE IS SPREADING

At Least One Letter a Week Received by Intended Victims

The old Spanish prison confidence game which foreign racketeers have worked or attempted to work on American business men for 30 years is spreading like measles, federal authorities revealed here today.

Park D. Colvin, chief postoffice inspector, disclosed he is receiving on an average of one letter a week to investigate, all of the same nature sent to New England business men by foreign men of mystery who need only a little money to lay their hands on a huge fortune, and pledged a third of the sum in return for aid.

Whereas the letters originally came only from Spain, however, they are now coming from South American countries, Portugal and Mexico as well, Colvin said.

There is nothing postoffice inspectors can do with regard to them except to warn recipients the schemes are fraudulent.

Hyman Alpert, owner of a delicatessen at 187 Townsend st., Roxbury was the latest person approached by mail, one "Risbe," giving a cable address in Olot, Spain, writing to say he was imprisoned by bankruptcy and beseeching aid to obtain $360,000, a third of which he promised Alpert for a little help. Alpert will remain at his delicatessen and forego the rainbow.

Colvin displayed another letter received yesterday from Rio de Janeiro which was almost exactly the same in text.

Revolt Threat Spreads Over Spain

Madrid, Dec. 7 (INS)—Armed with machine guns, troops patrolled the city today as rumors spread that revolt had broken out at Corunna with support from Madrid.

Special precautions were taken to protect property of the Spanish telephone company, owing to intense feeling aroused against the concern.

Premier Azana received permission from the Cortes to negotiate for annullment of the monopoly with the United States. The Spanish concern is dominated by the American international telephone and telegraph interests.

Farmers in Work Garb Ask Garner for Aid

Washington, Dec. 7 (AP)—Two men in working clothes today called on Speaker Garner and Vice-President Curtis, asking permission to present to them Friday a petition to be drawn by the Farmers' National Relief Conference.

They were Karl Dahlsten of Newman Grove, Neb., and George Keith of Buhl, Idaho.

When asked for an appointment, Garner said:

"Yes, I'm here from about 7:30 every morning until 4 or 5 each evening. I'll be glad to receive any communication you have and present it to the agriculture committee, if that's where it should go."

As they posed for a picture, Garner shook hands with Dahlsten, who was clad in red sweater and corduroy pants.

"You boys haven't worked on a farm much more than I have," said the Speaker. "Of course, I quit when I was 19, but I followed a plow many miles before then."

SOCIETY AIDS IN BOYS' EXHIBIT

This was no morning to breakfast in bed for a group of society women and debutantes, including Mrs. George E. Lyman, Jr., Mrs. Holden McGinley, Lydia Fuller, Mary E. Williams and Mary C. Bigelow.

Patronesses of the Chamber of Commerce display of lighting fixtures made by boys of the North Bennet St. Industrial School, they were on hand at 9 o'clock for the unveiling of the window and an inspection of the fixtures.

WOMAN IS MADE ILL BY NEWS OF RICHES

'ews that they may share most of a million-dollar fortune aroused in Salem and Lawrence heirs feeling ranging from scepticism to physical illness today.

When Thomas O'Donnell of Bow st., Salem, believed to be a grandnephew of Mrs. Ida Wood, eccentric millionaire who died alone and without any known blood relatives in New York city last March, was informed of the news by a New York firm, he was slow to believe it.

'Maybe it's just another bubble," he said, "and bubbles usually burst. I am making no plans on what I will do with the money until I get it."

Eugene O'Donnell, brother of Thomas, was enthusiastic.

"We think the story is true," he said. "We certainly hope we get some of the money."

Mrs. Catherine Sheehan, who found an old tintype which it is believed will establish her relationship with Mrs. Wood, shared the scepticism of her brother, Thomas

WOMAN HEIR ILL

In Lawrence Mrs. Winifred McEneaney, a cousin of Mrs. Sheehan, told reporters she was too ill to talk about her good fortune.

"When I was informed last night by lawyers that I would probably share in Mrs. Wood's fortune, the shock made me physically ill," she said. "I don't want to talk any more about it now."

Since the death of Mrs. Wood, nearly 1500 persons have claimed relationship with her. A New York law firm believes however that Mrs. Sheehan, her brothers and her cousin, have the best claim to the fortune.

Back of the finding of the supposed heirs lies the story of an immigrant girl whose rise from poverty and obscurity to wealth and social position rivals fiction.

FORTUNE OVER MILLION

There she changed her name to Ida Mayfield and posed as the daughter of a wealthy Southern planter. Thus was her identity as Ellen Walsh lost, and when later she married Benjamin Wood, a New York publisher, she concealed her real name and origin from all except her own immediate family.

Her husband, a brother of Fernando Wood, once mayor of New York, died in 1900. In the panic of 1907, Mrs. Wood withdrew all her money from the banks, and when she died last March, nearly a quarter of a million dollars in cash was found sewn in the hem of her skirt.

The loss of her near relatives and a lonely old age caused her to be regarded as eccentric. But after her death, it was revealed that she was a shrewd market operator, and built up most of her fortune, estimated at over $1,000,000, by speculation.

120 VETS STAY TO PRESS PLEA FOR BONUS

Washington, Dec. 7 (AP)—As the bulk of the selfstyled "hunger marchers" turned back to their homes in various parts of the country today, special police permission was granted for 120 World War veterans among them to remain here for a few days.

Plans were laid by the leaders of this group to appear before Congress with petitions asking bonus payment and protesting the eviction of the Bonus Army by federal troops July 28 after fatal riots.

Permission was obtained by Emanuel Levine, leader of the so-called "rank and file veterans," from Maj. Brown, police superintendent. Levine said he had made arrangements for housing the men.

"I am not prepared to issue a detailed statement at present," Levine said, "but tentative plans call for presentation to Congress of various petitions in line with needs of veterans."

GUN TRACED IN WANDERWELL MYSTERY

Guy—was named and sought as the "man in gray" who inquired for the soldier of fortune and suspected German spy on his yacht Carma at Long Beach a few minutes before Wanderwell was shot to death in his cabin Monday night.

But "anyone of a thousand persons might have killed him," Mrs. Aloah Wanderwell, the victim's attractive young widow, told the authorities, and they agreed.

WAIT FOR NEXT MOVE

The eight men and eight women—a cross section of life's adventure seekers who had signed on as crew of Wanderwell's yacht, Carma, for a 'round-the-world cruise—were released from custody after being held 24 hours as material witnesses and waited aboard the tragedy-anchored yacht for the next move in the baffling puzzle.

There was a strong suspicion that police were playing cat and mouse with the motley array of fortune hunters and adventurers, waiting for one of them to make the move.

Mrs. Wanderwell, speaking in one breath of her husband's many enemies, spoke in the next of going immediately ahead with the cruise, which was charted first to the Far East and the South Seas. Police made no comment.

Miss Parks, recently engaged by Wanderwell to chronicle the events of the cruise for a later lecture tour by him, will be subjected to further questioning, as will the three others who glimpsed the "man in gray" suspected of the slaying.

Lord Edward Eugene Montagu, second son of the Duke and Duchess of Manchester and god-son of King Edward VII, will also be subjected to further questioning with regard to a .32-caliber pistol which he said he loaned recently to a friend who loaned it, in turn, to another man the nobleman disclaims to know.

It was a pistol of this caliber which killed the soldier of fortune, and the death gun is missing.

A nation-wide appeal was made for the apprehension of the man called "Curley" Guy, tentatively identified from a picture by Harry Greenwood, a gambling ship employe, as a man he saw near the Carma's dock within two hours previous to the murder.

Guy was a former companion of Wanderwell on a South American trip, and recently quarreled with him and threatened his life, according to Mrs. Wanderwell. He has lived recently in Seattle and the search for him was concentrated there.

"ANY ONE OF THOUSAND"

There was, however, no announcement that similar identification had been made by Miss Parks and the three others who saw the man who boarded the Carma.

Police said they suspected revenge as the motive but hinted Wanderwell might have met his death at the hands of an irate husband.

"I can think of a thousand men who might have wanted to kill him, but for the life of me I can't think which one it might have been," Mrs. Wanderwell said.

"First I thought of Guy, the man who came part way from South America with us on our last trip. We had trouble with him and he left us in Panama. We saw him in Hollywood recently.

"But then I thought of the many men my husband knew, men who were his enemies and his friends and a thousand thoughts, suspicions and men have come to mind."

RECORD WAS SPOTTED

Said Lieut. Owen Murphy of the Long Beach police:

"This case is wide open. There were undoubtedly many motives that could have been behind Capt. Wanderwell's death. His record was spotted. I agree with Mrs. Wanderwell that a thousand persons might have wanted to kill him, but to find the killer will now be a matter of elimination."

Others of the adventurers expressed the hope the cruise would not be abandoned and revealed that each one had been assigned a duty. Some were to write and others sketch and lecture and make motion pictures. They planned to propagandize the international police, an old idea of Wanderwell. Wanderwell told them the cruise would be self-supporting, and they planned to live on fruits and nuts in the South Seas.

Lord Montagu disclaimed being a "remittance" man, paid by his parents to remain away from England.

"That is ridiculous," he said. "I am on perfectly good terms with my father. The plain truth of the matter is that I have an unholy zest for adventure. I wish to write. This tragedy has me a bit upset and mystified. I was not on board at the time of the murder, having attended a cinema at Long Beach.

SEEKS DIVORCE FROM WIFE WHO JAILED HIM

From the Salem jail, where he was committed for non-support, John H. Simmons of Beverly was today taken into probate court in an attempt to obtain a divorce from the woman responsiblef or his sentence.

Mrs. Delia H. Simmons of Danvers, who last October had her husband sent away, was not in court to contest his charge that he had deserted her.

Judge White took the case under advisement.

The Simmonses were married Feb. 16, 1925, and have one child, John J., Jr., aged seven, the husband testified while a jail guard sat close by.

Simmons said his wife deserted him two months after they were wed, telling him she was happier away from him.

"She told me she married me to save herself from jail," the husband testified. "She said she couldn't live with me and she was happy only when she was away from me."

Three years ago, he said, he attempted to affect a reconciliation and his wife acquiesced. But then suddenly he found himself in jail.

Shortly afterward he was released and he filed suit for divorce. Last October he was hailed into court by his wife and charged with non-support of her and their child. He was for the second time returned to jail, where he remains until Judge White decides how the Simmons marital affairs can be ironed out.

Little Girl Tramps Far to Find Santa

"There's nothing like a good long walk in the brisk winter air. It fills your lungs with oxygen, stimulates appetite, and is one of the best tonics you can take."

That's what the doctors tell you.

Sure. Walking is a great tonic. The poor ought to live forever. If they only had anything to eat when their appetites are stimulated.

We wonder what that thin little girl who walked into the office thought about it.

She was about eleven years old. No stockings. Broken shoes. A coat you could see through. Pinched cheeks. A slight cough.

"Mr. Christmas Basket Editor," she asked timidly, "will you take this letter?"

BRAVE LITTLE GIRL

Now one of the rules of the Christmas Basket Editor is that all letters must be mailed because it would be impossible to take care of the thousands who apply for help if they came in personally. The Christmas Basket Editor told the thin little girl, not unkindly, about the rule.

"But we didn't have 3 cents to buy a stamp," she apologized.

The editor read the letter. "So you walked from Roxbury? How are you going to get home?"

"Walk," she said as if anyone could imagine her doing anything else.

Walk. Three miles in. Three miles home. Not a brisk walk. The thin little girl could scarcely stand. Her little lungs filled with the fresh air of the city streets. Her appetite stimulated. Maybe her mother could spare an extra crust when she got home.

CHILDREN SUFFER

The Christmas Basket Editor saw to it that she did not have to take any more "stimulating tonic" by a walk home.

But you, who read this and feel that it is a terrible thing for children to suffer, why not do something about it?

The poor don't need sympathy. They need help.

Why not send in your donation to the Christmas Basket Editor at once. Mail it or bring it in to 5 Winthrop sq. And do it now before it is too late. Don't fill the stockings of needy children with your regrets when your donation can fill them with happiness.

The Salisbury family we hope will enjoy Christmas as much as we know some poor family will because of their generosity.

And to one who wants to be known as "Just a Friend," let him be sure he is a friend indeed to some family who has been praying for such a one.

Join the list of Goodfellows today. Send in your contribution. Happiness could never be purchased before at such a low price.

To Applicants for Christmas Baskets

In order that Christmas baskets go only to deserving and needy families, it is necessary that each application be approved by either your priest, or minister, or school teacher, or mail carrier and nearby storekeeper, or police officer, or social worker, or church or charity group. If you wish to apply for a basket, therefore, get an O. K. from any one of these persons. Do not come to the Evening American office, as it is impossible to personally confer with the many thousands of applicants. Be sure to give the number in the family.

School teachers, priests, ministers, police officers, mail carriers and church and charity groups are urged to send in their lists of deserving applicants as quickly as possible. A vast amount of work is necessary to list and check applicants against duplication, and a charitable deed done quickly is twice blessed. An especial effort to reach needy families not receiving city aid is requested.

Address all names and lists, as well as contributions, to the Christmas Basket Fund, Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop sq.

GROVE PLANS BIG BASKET DONATION

Here's a chance to attend one of Boston's smartest night clubs, enjoy a good dinner, see a floor show that would costyou $3 in any theater, and at the same time enable you to do your bit to make Christmas happy for the needy.

One week from tonight, Cocoanut Grove has generously offered to turn over to the Boston Evening American Christmas Basket Editor one-half the gros receipts of the entire night.

Remember, it will not cost those who attend Cocoanut Grove next Wednesday a penny more than they would pay any other night. There will be absolutely no extra charges of any kind. Cocoanut Grove will make the donation, but your presence there will enable the management to turn over a larger amount to the Christmas Basket Editor.

One of the liveliest floor shows from New York will present "Fantasy in Rhythm," with several former musical comedy stars numbered among the company. Vivian Janis, star of "Girl Crazy," and 12 dancing McKenna-Court girls will feature the brilliant program.

Others on the program will be Jane Allen, and the specialty dancing team of Barte and Violette.

TENT DANCE TO AID FUND

Morey Pearl, who has donated his ballroom, the Tent, and his famous orchestra for the benefit of the Christmas Basket Fund of the Boston Evening American, next Monday night, is always ready to lend his aid to a worthy cause.

"I know what it means to be in need," said Morey, when making his generous offer. "I had to work my way through school, and my heart goes out to those who are suffering from want.

"The orchestra is glad to donate its services. Every cent we make, we will turn over to the Christmas Basket Fund. The regular prices, 60 cents for men, 40 cents for ladies, will be charged."

BLAME PLACED ON FATHER OF GIBSON GIRL

out by Supreme Court Judge George H. Taylor, Jr., the case boils down to: male and female—for which are your sympathies?

The whole case is tangled up with human emotions. Not only those of Charlotte, the dignified brunette who is soon to be a mother. Nor those of Sidney, who said he was absolutely passive toward her. Nor his indignant mother's. And her indignant father's. The situation is rooted in human experience. Every spectator identified himself or herself with the two unhappy principals in the courtroom cast.

It all hinges on whether Charlotte yielded to Sidney on March 1 as she said she did, and only when he said he would not marry her unless she gave herself to him. Sidney says they were intimate two weeks before then, and he never mentioned marriage.

Charlotte, less than ten days from the ordeal of motherhood, was not expected to be in court to learn whether vengeance is to be hers.

It is a vengeance she does not wish to have—a vengeance, she says, she has been forced to seek to prevent the shedding of her lover's blood.

She still sees the blond, youthful riding master through the rose-colored glasses of love, despite the four hours of testimony yesterday, during which he branded her as a cold, calculating, worldly woman, who pursued him at every turn.

OUTLINES JURY CHARGE

Judge Taylor, after dismissing the jury until this morning, held lawyers for both sides until he had told them the substance of the charge he would make to the jury.

"The first question," he said, "will be the chastity of Miss Gibson. If it is shown that she was not chaste before the night of March 1, even though these former acts may have been with the defendant alone during February, as he testified, I must order the jury to acquit. Should they decide that she was chaste right up until the night of March 1 they still must consider other questions.

"If the jury decides that there was no promise of marriage on March 1, which was instrumental in inducing Miss Gibson to submit, they must acquit. I shall charge them that if they find that there was no sexual act on March 1, they must acquit.

"I shall charge them that there must be some corroborative evidence other than the testimony of the prosecutrix that there was a promise of marriage instrumental in inducing her to submit prior to the time of yielding. Of course, I shall tell them that this corroborative evidence may be induced from circumstantial evidence rendered by other witnesses. My charge will probably take one hour."

Do your Christmas Shopping in comfort—in

Arch Preserver Shoes

The toll that Christmas shopping exacts from most women is unnecessary. The fatigue, the weariness, the aching, burning feet, the frayed nerves are not the price that women pay for shopping—but the price they pay for wearing ordinary, unscientific shoes.

Ordinary shoes put up a fight against the foot. They weaken both arches of the foot, squeeze nerves and muscles, waste your energy and leave you worn out before the day is half over. You'll do more work; enjoy leisure more—in Arch Preserver Shoes.

Arch Preserver Shoes have these special features that no other shoe can give you.

1. Anchored spring steel arch giving natural support to the longitudinal arch of the foot. (patented.)
2. Scientifically placed and designed metatarsal support for the crosswise arch in the fore part of the foot.
3. Flat innersole allowing uninterrupted circulation and unrestricted action of muscles and tendons.
4. Glove-like flexibility, exactly where foot bends makes shoe essentially a part of foot structure.

GUY LOMBARDO TAKES ADVANCE PEEP AT NEW DODGE SIX

New York, N. Y.—Guy Lombardo, personable leader of one of America's most famous dance orchestras, and musical idol of the younger set, deserted his baton today for an advance showing of the new Dodge Six.

"It's a hit!" was the enthusiastic comment of the rhythm king afterwards. And since Mr. Lombardo has been responsible for some of the biggest hits in the song world, his statement may be considered prophetic.

"The new Dodge Six will click with everybody who wants a smart, youthful car that is sporty and smooth. And it's so peppy! It has the zip and go of a snappy fox-trot, combined with the gliding ease of a dreamy waltz. It has everything the public wants—good looks, impressive power, flashing speed and brilliant performance. And when you add to that the amazing value represented by this great car you've got a combination that will take the country by storm."

Although details of the new car have not yet been officially released by the Dodge organization, it is known that Dodge is ready to spring a real surprise when the new car is formally presented to the public. According to reports, the new Dodge Six is going to be offered with an astounding array of features, at a radical low price which will completely upset all established standards of automobile value.

purposes which they want to do themselves, but I want you to do this for me for I may use the material for a lecture some day or perhaps write a book."

Some four months ago, Miss Parks' family revealed, she became acquainted with Captain Wanderwell.

MOTHER ILL

"She met him through a mutual friend," her sister stated. "This whole mess is all so terrible. My mother, who has been ill for some time, is a nervous wreck over the affair and as for me—why, I simply can't think. We realize that Mary is in no way implicated, but having her mixed up in murder is unthinkable."

Charlie Chann, Earl Derr Biggers' Honolulu sleuth imbued with the philosophy of Confucius and the calm of the Occidental, could have found no more dramatic array of circumstance or colorful background from which to draw the solution of a ghastly murder than the stage on which this East Saugus girl is now playing a vital role.

Miss Parks' life is in a measure equally as colorful as that of the man in whose death she looms as a key figure.

For three years she managed the tours of Swami Yogananda, Hindu mystic and heard him in his lectures "for women only" on the weird, amazing doctrine of love and sex control. For three years she was his press agent. She was selling books for a book publishing house and was in New York more than three years ago when first she attended the cultist's lecture on Hindu philosophy of love.

Shortly afterward, according to the story told by the sister, Mary met Captain Wanderwell through a friend.

Mrs. Ursula Parks, the girl's mother, in broken English, tried to tell of Captain Wanderwell's interest in her daughter.

"All we know we gathered from Mary's letters. She wrote us of the new offer she received and how she had accepted a secretarial position with the captain, planning to make the cruise with the party round the world. She was elated," the sister continued.

At this point Frank Parks, the father, spoke up. After boasting of long friendship with Gov. Ely, he said:

"My daughter go everywhere. No afraid. Never. Always wanted to go out into the world and see things—big things."

STUDIED LAW

Ever since Mary was 16, they said, she worked—worked all the time with her eyes turned to a future of travel and self-cultivation. She began after graduating from Saugus high school, as an operator in the West Lynn Western Union, supplementing her daily routine with night courses at a business college in Lynn. For three years she studied at the Portia Law School, her mind intent then upon the law as a career. To further this pursuit, her family, outlined, she obtained employment in the law office of Walter Pyne, of Lynn, later moving into the law office of John H. Backus, of Boston, former U. S. assistant district attorney.

But the wanderlust forced her to resign from her position and accept a position with a book firm. This gave the girl an opportunity to travel. Mary was not a girl to remain cooped up in a small town. She wanted to get out into the world and find out the "why" of education and cultivation, to move with the best people.

So she traveled for the book firm, later to affiliate herself with the Hindu.

But after three years his "love control" cult and its philosophy palled on the finer sensibilities of the girl and she resigned.

By the merest stroke of chance, she met the world adventurer, four months ago or so. She has been in California for two years. When she gave up her job as a Hindu's press agent, she planned, her family said, to vacation in Hollywood, and then after a short while return to Saugus.

OLDEST OF FOUR

But the opportunity of two years of world travel presented itself and she jumped at the chance. The girl's family was set at ease when informed that Miss Parks is being held incommunicado in Long Beach.

"Mary good girl—good girl, my Mary——"

And Mrs. Parks, ill and upset, rocked to and fro in her living-room rocker.

She is the oldest in the family. A brother, Frank, is employed in a downtown department store. Ann is a Saugus hairdresser. There is a fourth child. The father has been retired on a pension from the General Electric, where for many years he worked as a shop foreman.

The Parks have lived at 8 Richards st., a two-story white, wooden dwelling for 19 years.

Bing Crosby to Return to Air Next Month

By N. F. T.

Checking up reveals no plan on the part of those tri-weekly "Magic Carpet" programs to replace Walter O'Keefe. He relinquishes his post as pilot after Saturday's studio show (WEEI) from 10 to 11 p. m.

WHICH WALTER WINS

Fate fashions many a funny situation. Winchell went off some months ago in favor of O'Keefe. So now within the current week the former Walter flips back flying a new commercial flag, while O'Keefe flops off to await another turn of the big network wheel. Howard Claney, he who has been promoting the product as an announcer throughout these full hour presentations, carries on in the master of ceremony role.

BUSHMAN IN BOSTON

Many may not know it but that one time romeo of the reels is in our midst, meaning Francis X. Bushman. Sure enough and not on any stage either. He's here broadcasting. Monday found him on WHDH. Yesterday he was heard over WAAB, and remaining mornings of the week he holds forth at 10 o'clock through WHDH. Charm still characterizes the Bushman voice, even if the talkies have apparently passed him up permanently for some reason or other.

January 2d is the day Bing Crosby returns, replacing the Boswell Sisters. Thereafter, also on the same series, Tom Howard will be heard in the spotlight heretofore occupied by Arthur (Street Singer) Tracy. Ruth Etting and Norman Brokenshire remain unmolested for a time at least.

WORDS OF WISDOM

Harold A. LaFount, a prominent member of the Federal Radio Commission, was a guest speak · during the recent National Association of Broadcasters at St. Louis. Among other timely things Commr. LaFount emphasized was: "the danger of over-commercializing is a real temptation for which many stations have fallen." His further expressed thought had to do with certain outlets operating almost mainly for the profits gained by excesive and monotonous advertising talk, rather than "in the public interest, convenience and necessity" specified as a basis for every license issued by the government. As a follow-up he added: "I warn them, they are selling their birthright for a mess of pottage and their judgment day will come." Bravo, Mr. LaFount, you told them in no uncertain terms.

LOCAL LATHER

Well, the much discussed Nancy Howe (WNAC) Richard Osgood nuptials take place today, with said Hub radio newlyweds being interviewed tonight at 8:30 over Yankee network waves by their big boss...Listeners generally are much impressed with the new Ray Meyers Sunday night half hour launched last week (WBZ) in which Lowell Thomas travels and thrills are dramatized. Studio staff men John McNamara, Sam Ross, John Clark, Malcolm McCormick, Aidan Redmond and Jim Hatfield play parts. It's he-man stuff, something worth making a memo about at that...Contemporary "colyum" scribe Arthur (Dial Twists) Johnson nearly had his stylish Tuxedo trappings taken when second story men broke into his home Sunday and scattered a new satin lapeled suit and all the fixins' around the floor upon being frightened off by none other than Arthur himself, who can't weigh over 115 lbs. . . . Let such be a lesson to thoughtless ones who now and then make predictions about radio writers being due for a slug in the chops—eh? This new nightly "Christmas Carol" sketch (WNAC) at 6:30 and staged by Bob (Big Brother) Emery, has everything kiddies clamor for. He even tells how Santa Claus can be reached on the phone hereabouts . . . Dr. Arthur W. Gilbert, Commissioner of Agriculture for Massachusetts, speaks this evening (WAAB) at 9:15 under New England Council auspices . . . Boston's little blues singer, Betty Brooks, says she goes on with her all-request program tomorrow night (WEEI) at 7 o'clock, Amos n' Andy or no Amos n' Andy, so there!

Dry Chief to Hunt Big Men in Racket

Washington, Dec. 7 (AP)—An objective of detecting and bringing to justice commercial rather than private violators of dry laws, is set for the Prohibition Bureau by Director Amos W. W. Woodcock in his annual report today.

A total of 90,217 prohibition cases made by the bureau for the 1932 fiscal year, compared with 76,580 in the previous year, was reported by the prohibition director.

When Your Cough Hangs On, Mix This at Home

Saves $2. So Easy! No Cooking!

The best cough remedy that money could buy can easily be mixed at home. It costs very little, yet it's the most reliable, quick-acting medicine you ever used. The way it takes hold of stubborn coughs, giving immediate relief, is astonishing.

Any druggist can supply you with 2½ ounces of Pinex. Pour this into a pint bottle, and add granulated sugar syrup to make a full pint. To make syrup, use 2 cups of sugar and one cup of water, and stir a few moments until dissolved. No cooking needed. It's no trouble at all, and saves two-thirds of the money a family usually spends on cough medicine. Keeps perfectly and tastes fine.

It is surprising how quickly this loosens the germ-laden phlegm, soothes and heals the inflamed membranes, clears the air passages, and thus ends a severe cough in a hurry.

Pinex is a compound of Norway Pine, in concentrated form, the most reliable healing agent for severe coughs. It is guaranteed to give prompt relief or money refunded.

Whose Big Buck Was It? Both Hunters Shot Him. Each Says 'Twas Other.
Thereby Hangs a Tale. Tony Shea Baits Trap. Catches Twin Gunners.

The Big Deer Hunt at Helen Winter Camp

IF A DOG BITES a man it isn't news. But if a man bites the dog it is news. In line with editor Dana's idea, if two hunters blaze away at the same buck and start a war over who gets the credit for bringing it down, it isn't news. But when two hunters, like Alvie Fisher of Hyde Park and Harry Gilbert of Braintree, both blaze away at a deer and then fall all over themselves crediting the other fellow with it, thereby hangs a tale. No, Alvie and Harry didn't pot a deer out of season. It was after sunup on Monday with the season legally open when they both filled the same buck with lead. And Deputy Game Warden Tony Shea was looking right at them—and laffing his head off. Park yourself in the Helen Winter Camp up there on the banks of the Swift River and we'll tell you about it.

IT'S SUNUP IN the Swift River country. The dawn is tossing the surrounding hills, but the mist still blankets the valley. The gray light of the flush of the morning, filtering in the windows of the Helen Winter Camp reveals the gang still under the blankets. Snores mingle with the muffled yelps of Tony Shea's dog Patches, dreaming of bird hunts past and bird hunts to come in front of the smouldering embers of the log fire. There's the high falsetto wheezing of big Johnny Hines and Jack Watson and the deep rumble of little Bill Thatcher and Tony Shea, whose snoring sounds like the trumpetings of elephants. That whistling, sick, piccolo chirp, sounding from the gloom over there in the corner furthest from the fire, is from "Doc" Miller, who has buried himself in the blankets to keep warm. Alvie Fisher breaks off after hitting a high C, stirs in his sleep, rubs his eyes, glances at his wrist watch and digs an elbow into the midsection of his bedfellow, Harry Gilbert.

"Hey, stop kicking me, Alvie!" grunts Harry. "Get over on your own side of the bed!"

"I ain't kickin' you, you boob," hisses Alvie. "Wake up, you simp. Don't you know we're going to get the jump on the rest of the gang and get out and get our deer meat, while the getting's good? Shake a leg!"

Comprehension comes quickly to the sleepy Gilbert, e'en tho the hot toddies of the night before still lull him. Alvie rolls out one side of the bunk and Harry from the other, tiptoeing into the kitchen where they hastily, but silently and surreptiously, sneak into their hunting togs amid the snores of their campmates and pick guns from the stack in the corner. As they softly unbolt the door Alvie whispers:

"We'd better head for that patch of alders along the West Branch where the deer signs were so thick, yesterday, Harry. We'll get a buck there as sure as you're born."

THE DOOR HAD scarcely closed on Fisher and Gilbert when Tony Shea, who only had been simulating sleep, hopped out of bed remarking to himself "Yeah, and you'll get your buck long before you reach those alders unless I'm mistaken." Then raising his voice, Tony trumpeted: "Get up, fellers get up! Hoist yourselves! The trap's about to spring!" The gang tumbled helter skelter from the blankets and crowded around Tony, who was kneeling, peeking from the corner of the window.

GILBERT AND FISHER had stopped outside the cabin and were injecting shells into their guns. They rounded the corner of the cabin and headed down the old dirt road. The two hunters hadn't gone 30 feet when Alvie was observed suddenly to stop and gaze into a thicket on his right. The gang in the window looked and saw the head of a big buck, ears cocked forward, startled eyes gazing at Harry and Alvie, framed in the dense thicket. Low to the ground one even could see a daintily poised hoof.

"Bang!" "Bang!" roared the guns of Alvie and Harry almost in unison. "Bang!" "Bang!" went the other two barrels. The big buck's head disappeared as he toppled over.

"I've got him!" roared Alvie.

"Whoopee! I potted him sure!" echoed Harry.

Into the covert after their kill scrambled the bold hunters.

HERE WE'LL HAVE to vary a little from plain truth and pure unadulterated fact. What Harry said and Alvie echoed only could be printed on asbestos paper. Such words belong not in this family newspaper. Sufficeth it to say, as Harry scrambled into the thicket there on the ground before him lay a stuffed buck's antlered head, brought from Tony Shea's home and placed craftily in the thicket in the dark of the moon while Harry and Alvie were having their toddies on a Sunday night. Alvie noticed the deer's hoof dangling by a string from a briar branch and as craftily screened as was the buck's head itself. The laugh certainly was on Harry and Alvie.

AND THAT'S WHY Alvie and Harry, if you meet them on Washington st., today, both will deny bagging the big buck of the Swift River country. "It was Alvie," will aver Harry, but Alvie will insist: "It was Harry." And then just to get you off the trail the both of 'em laughingly will tell you how the gang over at Deputy Warden Louie Pelky's camp at North Prescott all were inveigled into starting a deer drive, yesterday, because of prevalence of deer tracks along a certain brook. Those deer tracks all were made by the same hoof that belonged to the big buck Alvie and Harry "bagged" over at the Helen Winter rendezvous. Alvie and Harry, y'know, simply had to "get back" at someone.

HELEN PLANS TO REGAIN CROWN

New York, Dec. 7 (AP) — Helen Wills Moody is back home from an extended visit abroad and already looking forward to regaining her national women's tennis singles championship.

"Queen Helen" let that particular title go by default last season, preferring to remain abroad after winning the French and British championships and leading the American Wightman cup team to victory.

Mrs. Moody said she already was laying plans to compete in the 1933 nationals and probably in two or three of the big eastern tournaments as well.

English Team Wins

Stamford Bridge, England, Dec. 7 (AP)—England today defeated Australia in an international soccer match four goals to three.

Australia came back strongly in the second half, after trailing 2—0 at half time, but could not overcome England's early advantage.

COLLEGE DAILY RAPS ALUMNI

Stanford University, Cal., Dec. 7 (INS)—The Stanford Daily today bitterly scored the alumni "wolves" it claimed were partly responsible for the resignation of Coach "Pop" Warner.

In an editorial, the Daily said:

"A drawn out period of concentrated howling on the part of alumni wolves ended when Warner handed in his resignation.

"There wasa disappointment in many alumni camps. In the southern part of the state there was jubilation.

WINSTON FIT, RING SOLONS DECLARE

By JACK CONWAY

Hartford, Ct. Dec. 7 — Unknown Winston showed Dan Kelley and Tom Niland of the Massachusetts Boxing Commission, and Tom Donahue of the Connecticut Boxing Commission how he plans to knock out Ernie Schaaf at the Boston Arena on next Monday night during a furious workout at Charter Oak Gym in this city.

Winston furnished one of the most brilliant exhibitions of fighting and boxing ever witnessed here. Which is saying a great deal in view of the fact Kid Kaplan and Bat Battalino, former world's featherweight champions, prepared for their battles in the same gym.

Perhaps it was the presence of two Massachusetts and one Connecticut commissioners that inspired Winston. Then it may have been due to the fact Dennis McMahon and Lou Viscusi have Winston in the best condition of his career.

I believe the Winston I saw work out during five rounds of actual boxing, three rounds of bag punching and two rounds of rope skipping could have stepped to bat and given a good account of himself against any heavyweight in the world. The Negro boxed brilliantly, using a straight left jab effectively as well as scoring with his celebrated right hand punch. He was bobbing and weaving like a Dempsey, letting terrific punches fly from every angle.

AMAZES COMMISSIONERS

"Winston is ready for the title fight right now," said Kelley. "He is a much better scrapper than he was when he licked Schaaf recently. Watch his left hand. He keeps it popping in the face of his opponent. And how he belts them with his right."

Tom Niland was also enthusiastic about Winston's showing.

"Winston is in perfect condition for the Schaaf bout," said Niland. "It looks to me as if Schaaf is in for a rough evening. Winston moves so fast Ernie will have a difficult time hitting him. The Winston punch has tremendous power behind it. He will knock out any man in the world he nails on the jaw with his right hand."

Tom Donahue has been watching Winston work out each day, and so was not surprised as Kelley and Niland over the great improvement which the Negro has shown in his boxing since the last Schaaf bout.

"I look for Winston to beat Schaaf again," said Donahue. "The Negro is improving with each bout. Schaaf, on the other hand, has passed his peak. I would not be surprised if Winston won by a knockout."

Donahue told Commissioners Kelley and Niland that Connecticut recognizes Winston as the New England heavyweight champion. He stated that Sharkey could not turn his New England title over to Schaaf in view of the fact the latter was recently outpointed by Winston.

KAPLAN LIKES UNKNOWN

Kid Kaplan, former world's featherweight champion, was at the ringside as Winston worked out. He told me he has placed $1,000 against $800 that Winston wins the decision. He declared he has $500 which he would like to wager that Winston scores a knockout if given odds.

Winston boxed with Tiger Henderson, Tom Williams, Stanley Paliusis and Johnny Dwyer. Henderson went two rounds the others a round each.

When Winston completed his workout, he was weighed by Dan Kelley. The Negro scaled 189¾ pounds which is three and three-quarters pounds more than he weighed for his last bout with Schaaf.

"We have been building Winston up," said Dennis McMahon, one of Unknown's managers. "He only scaled 181 pounds when he returned to Hartford from his trip to Florida. I plan to have Winston enter the ring at 190 pounds. At this notch he will have terrific power behind his punch. He ought to knock Schaaf cold."

OTHER MANAGER TALKS

Lou Viscusi, Winston's other manager, predicted that his protege would score a knockout inside of six rounds.

"Then New York and the big money," said Lou. "A knockout over Schaaf will send Winston into the ring with Max Baer.

Winston will remain in training here until after his workout on Friday afternoon. He will then break camp, arriving in Boston early Friday evening. He will do light work at a Boston gym Saturday afternoon, then lay off on Sunday so that he will have all of his fire when he steps into the ring against Schaaf.

Grove Drops Deer

Lanaconing, Md., Dec. 7 (INS)—Lefty Grove, southpaw pitcher of the Philadelphia Athletics, today was preparing to feast on a 135-pound deer he shot on a hunting trip in Pennsylvania.

Immediate Probe Is Demanded by Babe

Dallas, Tex., Dec. 7 (AP)—Mildred Babe Didrikson, one of the world's greatest feminine athletes, is so eager to play amateur basketball this winter she has demanded an immediate investigation of her disqualification by the Amateur Athletic Union.

Insurance company officials have announced they will aid Miss Didrikson's fight for reinstatement in the A. A. U. but it appeared likely she would not play on the basketball team until the matter was cleared up.

Lawrence di Benedetto, chairman of the Southern Amateur Athletic Union at New Orleans, said he had started an investigation. At Chicago, J. Lyman Bingham, assistant to Avery Brundage, president of the A. A. U., said Miss Didriksen's case rested now with the district committee.

Miss Didrikson said she felt she had been wrongfully convicted on circumstantial evidence. She said she never had seen the testimonial for the automobile until it appeared in print.

She admitted that several weeks ago she posed standing beside an automobile of the make advertised, but that she had told the Dallas agent of the company the picture could not be used until she turned professional, if ever.

The name of W. Foster Jacoby of Dallas, director of city parks and secretary of the Texas A. A. U., was brought into the case when Miss Didrikson asserted he had asked her to sign an endorsement of an automobile, promising her that it would not affect her amateur standing. She stated she refused to sign and told Jacoby the use of her name in that connection would be against her wishes.

Miss Didrikson also said Jacoby had urged her to turn professional soon after she returned from the 1932 Olympics at Los Angeles. Jacoby could not be reached for a statement.

MALONEY TALKS KNOCKOUT

By RINGSIDE

Shamus Maloney says he will knock all the college education out of Johnny Dixon, Boston College hero, when he meets the young man from Norwood in a 10-round bout at the Boston Garden on Friday night.

Maloney does not believe a college education gets one to first base, let alone second, third and home after the chimes sound for the opening of the initial heat.

Maloney will admit under cross-examination that he once lingered at the University of Miami for two weeks, but he declares the college stuff didn't take. So he avers he isn't in Dixon's class.

Shamus likes to tell the world how he came up off the streets of South Boston to crash into the army and then into the fight game.

Maloney has been working at Kelley & Hayes' gym and has got into good condition without the aid of Bill Shakespeare or the Einstein theory, not to mention the fourth dimension.

Dixon has worked in the same gym, and has been very happy other than on those occasions when large Dan Carroll has been trying to kick Solly Snyder, his manager, into kingdom come.

Dixon is getting the chance of his young life. If he can belt Shamus on the chin despite his college education, he can write his own ticket in the boxing game.

Billy Ames mentions merrily the fact Al Grayson of Charlestown and Dick Madden of Roxbury will meet in the six-round semifinal. I presume neither of these boys has been forced to get their shoulders out of place lugging books.

Fuller Wins; Heuser Edges Eddie Sims

Cleveland, Dec. 7 (AP)—Sammy Fuller of Boston, contender for the lightweight crown, won the decision over Billy Wallace of Cleveland in a 10-round bout here.

Fuller stepped through the 10 rounds in easy fashion, but was held on nearly even terms by the local boxer. Fuller weighed 136 and Wallace 135.

In the semifinal Adolf Heuser, 178, of Germany, took a decision from Eddie Sims, 194, of Cleveland.

The program was a charity affair sponsored by the Cleveland News.

Sammy Slaughter spilled Paul Pirrone of Cleveland in the second and third rounds of another 10-round fray, and came into the fourth with a short right uppercut that put Pirrone out. Slaughter, who hails from Terre Haute, Ind., weighed 161 and Pirrone 160.

Patsy Perroni of Cleveland, outweighed 21 pounds by Tom Heeney of New Zealand, who scaled 211, conducted a one-sided battle that won the decision for him.

JOE JERWA

First to feel the axe which Manager Art Ross has promised to drop on the Bruins will be George Owen. The ex-Harvard star must give place in the varsity lineup to Joe Jerwa of the Cubs or freshmen.

BOSTON MAN IS PISTOL CHAMP

Washington, Dec. 7—George H. Keyes, of 82 Brainerd rd., Boston, Mass., has been announced here by the National Rifle Association as the winner of the individual slow-fire pistol championship in the fall series of national rifle and pistol matches conducted by the association.

Keyes' score was 192 out of a possible 200 points which outranked, under the rules of breaking ties, a 192 turned in by Ralph Cory of Newton, Iowa.

The Boston pistol marksman also won the fifth place medal in the slow-fire automatic pistol match with a score of 180x200. This event went to Louis White, New York City, who shot a 192.

In the nineteen events of the fall program, there were more than 500 entries from all parts of the country. The competitors fired their targets on their home ranges and the targets were scored by the National Rifle Association.

Yale Hockey Sextet Meets Boston Team

New Haven, Ct., Dec. 7 (INS)—Yale's hockey team will open its season tonight at the arena here in a game with the Boston All-Star Hockey Club, formerly known as the Olympic Club of Boston. With four veterans of last year's squad, Coach Holcomb York expects to put a strong six on the ice tonight after more than a month's practice.

SHARKEY PREPS SCHAAF IN GYM

By GEORGE W. GRIMM

Jack Sharkey, world's heavyweight champion, sent Ernie Schaaf over the hurdles in his Tuesday workout for his 12-round New England championship heavyweight fight with "Unknown" Winston at the Boston Arena next Monday night in aid of the Boston Evening American Christmas Basket Fund.

Sharkey again this afternoon will snap the whip as Ernie starts his final drive to win the "rubber" contest with the Negro. Ernie won the first contest by a knockout, and a month or more ago he was outpointed by Unknown.

Slowness on the part of Schaaf caused his defeat the last time he stepped through the ropes. He believes he has added enough speed to win over Winston next week, but his biggest asset will be what Sharkey has been drilling into him.

Few fighters can go over the jumps, using the same methods as Sharkey. Schaaf has enough class, but he fails to throw his right hand as Sharkey does.

Schaaf holds his hands high when in the ring, while Sharkey holds his between the shoulders and waist in such a position that he can follow through.

Sharkey devoted his matinee putting different ideas into Schaaf's head, while the other half of the managership, Johnny Buckley, was in Cleveland with Adolph Heuser.

Schaaf went through 12 rounds at a rapid clip. He boxed two rounds apiece with Obe Walker and Sam Ward. The former is a fighter, while the latter is a very fast and clever boxer.

Schaaf did three rounds on the heavy sand bag, took a snappy three rounds work on the punching bag, two rounds on the weights and the rest of the time doing calisthenics.

GEORGE MAY QUIT RATHER THAN JOIN CUBS

EXCLUSIVE!

By BILL GRIMES

One of the first moves to add some much needed speed and color to the Bruins will be the discharge of George Owen, former Harvard athlete, who will be replaced by Joe Jerwa of the Cubs.

The Bruin management has been contemplating such a change for weeks. Owen has been on the spot, so to speak, all season. He has not come up to expectations, according to the powers that be, and upon returning from Montreal on Monday, it was decided to drop him to the Cubs and bring up the colorful and hard working Joe Jerwa.

In all probability, Owen will refuse to join the Cubs. He is not sufficiently hard pressed financially to entertain a proposition to play in the Canadian American League. He is in business here and therefore also would refuse to listen to a trade or a straight sale which would take him to any other National Hockey League club.

Owen was a box office attraction when he broke into the professional ranks three years ago. He was the first American college athlete of note to turn pro and a new clientele trekked to the Garden to see him.

BALKS AT WESTERN TRIP

Although from his debut, Owen's style of play failed to meet with the approval of the Bruin management, he was allowed to go along without interference or criticism. He cooked his goose chiefly by refusing to accompany the team West last season at a time when many of the players were suffering from the flu or out of the game with injuries.

As there is a clause in his contract which states that he can refuse to make all but one Western trip, Owen was within his rights when he stayed at home, but nevertheless his action created much talk among the players and also started gossip concerning the management playing favorites. At times last year, while he was captain, Owen openly criticized some of his mates on the ice and naturally lost caste.

At the close of last season, Owen's contract with the Bruins expired. Like many of the other players, it is alleged that he received a cut. He did not report to the training camp until late and as he has reached the age where it requires weeks of hard work for him to get in shape, he has not been up to the form expected of him.

GEORGE HAS SLIPPED

After watching Owen in every home game, it must be admitted that either he is not bearing down or that he has slipped badly. Defensively, he has made few real attempts to body opponents who have swept around him without interference and with far too much regularity to suit Manager Ross. Offensively, he still has the same fast wrist snap shot but he has slowed up so much that he has trouble keeping up with the plays. And the Bruins are by no means the speediest outfit in the league.

Owen's worst, or at least, his most noticeable weakness is unconquerable desire to score. He is down the ice much too frequently for a defense man and now that he has lost his speed has been caught out of too many plays.

In Joe Jerwa, the Bruins will acquire a fast, courageous, hard-working defense man. He has played like a demon for the Cubs, who will suffer from his absence, and is deserving of a real shot at the big show.

AMERKS FLATTENED

The Bruins came through in the overtime period to beat the N. Y. Americans, 2 to 0, last night at the Boston Garden. For three periods the Amerks tied the Bruins up but finally Nels Stewart, Dit Clapper and Marty Barry broke way on a three-man attack after the big Bruins center man had received the puck from Lionel Hitchman in the center zone.

Stewart took the disc into the attacking zone and then dropped a pass back to Barry, who whipped the rubber out to Clapper on the right wing. The Bruin captain passed across the mouth of the net and Stewart, who had dashed from the goal as soon as he gave the disc to Barry, slapped home the first marker. Just before the close of the overtime period, Joe Lamb broke away after the Americans had put on a five-man attack and by cleverly warding off Rollie Martin with his body as the right-winger attempted to check him, raced in on Roy Worters and whaled in his first tally of the season.

MAT WAR ENTERS SECOND ROUND TONIGHT

AirBlue With Wild Charges Hurled by Promoters

That wrestling war! What's it all about? We had heard of rasslers promising to tear their opponents limb from limb and strew the highways with the gruesome remains. But it wasn't until this week that we heard Boston's Ace wrestling promoters were in the throes of a death grapple and tossing threats like confetti. So Riley Grannon of the American's staff decided to find out what it's all about. So far there have been no casualties but with any luck you can't tell what will happen. Here is the first of a series on Boston's wrestling war.

By RILEY GRANNON

The second battle in the wrestling racket's war to the death, occurs on the Huntington ave. front tonight.

What may prove to be the decisive clash in the cut price ticket imbroglio finds Promoter Charlie Gordon presenting his usual show at Mechanics Building and the rival impresario, Steve McPherson, countering with a program at the Arena.

Claims and counter claims fill the air. But neither will back down. This fight is to a finish. The finish of one or the other.

The heavy firing in the Back Bay sector is the result of Gordon's shift of his pre-Thanksgivi show from his usual Wednesday date to Tuesday. This happened to be the night on which McPherson had been operating. The latter retaliated by shifting to Wednesday for his next show in opposition to Gordon who had returned to his original date.

McPHERSON IN LEA'

The first skirmish last week resulted in a victory for McPherson and his Arena cohorts. More grunt and groan fans stormed the citadels of the Arena than rattled the turnstiles at Mechanics Building.

Tonight's clash will go a long way towards establishing the ultimate victor. For the second time each is going to the firing line as a direct antagonist of the other. Both are confident that they will gain the victory.

The war is a battle of personalities as well as issues. Charlie Gordon is a former sales manager. Smooth and suave, he is a picture of what the well dressed man will wear. Never a hair out of place. Of medium height and weight and a goodly share of looks. Is an earnest and convincing talker. Has plenty of self confidence. Thinks his wrestling shows established a new era in the mat game.

Steve McPherson is a larger and more rugged person. Well over six feet and built in proportion. Dresses neatly but not as dapperly as his rival. This Lochinvar out of the West wears a mustache. Is a former newspaper editor. Talks slowly in a matter of fact way. Will hang on like a bull dog. Expansive and genial. Gruff voiced.

RAPS BOWSER

"McPherson is like a little dog yapping around my heels," he claims. "Annoying but not dangerous."

"The true story is that I am the best wrestling promoter around Boston. I give the people what they want. Light, fast men who show more real wrestling in five minutes than the ponderous pachyderms do in a half an hour. The fans like my shows and keep coming to them. Consequently I am a menace to the big shots

"The big shots? Mr. Bowser is one. McPherson claims that he is promoting on his own. But the lease at the Arena is held by Bowser. Bowser's wrestlers only are used.

"Don't laugh when I say I am the best wrestling promoter. I can prove it. Outside of the shows which Bowser ran in connection with some charity, my shows usually outdraw his.

"And don't stop at that. In the towns outside of Boston I am giving him to much competition. Every show I run in cities like Lynn, Manchester, Fall River draws well.

"The reason is that I have the best middleweight and light heavyweight wrestlers in the world. And I challenge Bowser and McPherson to throw their best men in these classes into the same ring with my men. Why the best man they have shown is Pinkie Gardner I have a half dozen wrestlers who can throw Pinkie as fast as he can get up."

McPHERSON BROADCASTS

"What a lot of hokum that is. If Mr. Bowser would only get behind me I would be tickled to death. I am promoting entirely on my own. The only money in this is mine or money that I have borrowed from my dad. It has been quite a struggle but I am over the top.

"As for Mr. Bowser. Of course he is on the lease at the Arena. Not only for this year but for several years to come He was glad to sub-lease to me particularly when it took a load off his shoulders.

"I use Bowser's wrestlers because they are the best and for that reason only. You can't name a single, outstanding wrestler of any fame who isn't in this stable. You can't quarrel with me because I obtain the best talent to be found.

"If Mr. Bowser would like to associate himself with me I'll meet him more than half way. I could use his prestige and money.

"The answer to the whole thing is that somebody is hurt And the one hurt can be found no farther away than Mechanics Building. When I started the crowds were small. Gordon counted me small potatoes. I was so insignificant that he thought he could run his show on my usual night with impunity.

And with no comeback.

"Well I had a comeback. I merely used Gordon's night. And I outdrew him by more than 2000 customers. And that proves several things. One that my shows give more action. And two that you can't fool all the people.

"I am tickled to death to have Gordon ignore me. But he'll find it a lot more difficult to ignore the bigger and better crowds at the Arena. As well as the bigger and better shows.

Tonight's the night. Both promoters expect their banner crowds. Tomorrow's American will carry the latest developments in this "crooshal" struggle.

ASK THORNHILL, NEVERS FOR POP

Palo Alto, Calif., Dec. 7 (AP)—Denials of a reported exodus of Stanford freshmen football players flew thick and fast here and out of the barrage of verbal and written statements came the first definite public recommendation of a successor to Coach Glenn S. Warner, who resigned Monday.

Members of the first year team issued a statement supposed to represent all players denying any intention to transfer to Temple University, Philadelphia, where Warner is under contract. In the statement the freshman players recommended the appointments of C. E. "Tiny" Thornhill and Ernie Nevers, as co-coaches to succeed Warner.

Thornhill has been assistant coach at Stanford the last 11 years, preceding Warner by two years to lay the groundwork for his chief. Nevers Stanford's All-American fullback of 1925, and developed by Warner, became an assistant coach here this season.

The campus was in a frenzy of excitement following published reports that several stars of the freshman squad planned to follow Warner to Temple next year.

Coach Warner ill at home with a cold said he thought it all was "a lot of loose talk." He pointed out Temple has a one-year eligibility rule which would prevent any prospective transfers from playing in 1933.

The board of athletic control will meet Thursday with selection of a successor to Warner as the chief order of business.

Nunzi Lombardi, St. Charles	lhb
Wm. Graham, Mission	rhb
Anthony Parrella, St. Charles	fb

All scholastic honors are awarded, for the final time of this season, with the naming today of the ace eleven of the Catholic High School League.

This star outfit was picked by the coaches of the seven-team circuit after lengthy conferences, and its lineup is excellent. Seven able coaches can't be wrong, so this team certainly represents the best in the way of football talent to be found in the active young loop.

The All choices were announced this morning by Rev. George M. Dowd, of St. Mary's in Brookline, director of the league.

St. Charles high of Waltham snared the league championship this year and the All team reflects the respect the mentors have for the Waltham youngsters. Four boys from St. Charles high on the first team give that school a major portion of the laurels.

John Duddy, captain-elect of the St. Charles eleven, is in the left end berth. Fast, and a smart gridman, Duddy merited the position on the first team. Four of the coaches chose Duddy as the ace wing of the league.

CORMIER AT QUARTER

Herb Morris, Cathedral high, left tackle, is one of two boys who caught five coaches' eyes during the season. The other boy who received five votes is Lionel Cormier, standout quarterback of the Immaculate Conception high group of Revere.

Jim Heffernan, captain of the St. Clement's team won the right end berth. He and Duddy would make a fine wing pair on any team. And George Lund, Immaculate Conception, would be a fit running-mate to work with Morris at the important tackle positions.

George McGuern of Mission and George Lund of Immaculate Conception are the left and right guard respectively of this star group. Both are powerful, and could take it. Maurice Clara of St. Charles is pivot.

In the backfield with Cormier are Nunzi Lombardi of St. Charles, Bill Graham of Mission and Anthony Parrella of St. Charles.

Power and speed in every position would equip this eleven to tackle any school team of the State, though the average weight is below that of the other All-School elevens named this season.

HONORABLE MENTION

In the voting the following boys ran close behind the first team members and hence were awarded honorable mention: End, John Murphy, St. Mary's; tackle, John Kenney, Mission; guard William Murray, St. Clements; center, Art Carlo, St. Mary's; quarterback, Tom Manning, St. Mary's; halfback Alfred Downey, Cathedral; fullback, Albert Bouzan, Sacred Heart.

Ed Minahan, St. Charles; Joe Sullivan St. Clement's; John McCarthy, Cathedral; Jack Leary, Sacred Heart; Tim Collins, Immaculate Conception; Brother Dominic, Mission, and Dick Moynihan of St. Mary's are the coaches who voted.

Each of the all-teams selected by the coaches have been better football lineups than the preceding teams. Indicating that the teams of the league are fast improving

GRIMM OPPOSED TO BIG CUT

Columbus, O., Dec. 7 (INS)—Charley Grimm, manager of the Chicago Cubs, struck a gladiatorial pose today and protested on behalf of the ball players against the 50 per cent salary cut club owners, are talking about with all seriousness.

Mr. Grimm asserts he is a very naive fellow, who knows next to nothing about how much currency is paid to his players, inasmuch as he is only their manager, but——

"I'm all opposed to this talk of slashing salaries as much as 50 per cent, even 40 per cent, and I speak from the manager's point of view.

"The ball players, the guys that pack 'em in the stands and keep the game going, are ready to accept a moderate reduction, but would you call 50 per cent moderate?

"If they cut Babe Ruth's salary from $70,000 to $35,000 would you call that moderate?"

The National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues, holding its annual convention here, is just about convinced that nothing else will save the game. And even Branch Rickey, vice-president of the St. Louis Cardinals, who has paid some fancy prices in his day, is in accord.

Brown Named Leader

Middletown, Ct., Dec. 7 (INS)—Charles Brown, of Ames, Ia., an end, will captain the Wesleyan University football team next year. He was elected yesterday.

CHARLIE GORDON

That strange-looking gent at the top is none other than your old friend Paul Bowser, who, according to Charlie Gordon (right), is the octopus of the Boston wrestling game. Charlie has other descriptions for him, too, but not printable ones. McPherson (left) is just "doin' my best an' tryin' to make a livin'," while Gordon is craving battle and has picked out Bowser and McPherson to give it to him. It's likely to be interesting while it lasts and here's wishing them all luck. Here's one spot where the fan will have to get the best of it.

MR. BOSTON

By JACK CONWAY

Hartford, Ct., Dec. 7—If Paul Revere had been around and had tried to keep up with Dan Kelley, Tom Niland, Bill Jones and myself, I am quite sure he would not have even placed. That's how good we are when it comes to hopping across the dear old countryside in the small hours of the morning.

Mr. Boston

I had made an appointment for Dan Kelley and Tom Niland to accompany me to Hartford to see Unknown Winston train for his title bout with Ernie Schaaf. Kelley was booked to make three speeches at as many athletic nights, but promised to kick off for Hartford at the American Legion headquarters in Cambridge at 10:30 p. m.

When Bill Jones, the photographer who mastered the art of taking fight pictures at Shelby Montana when Dempsey outscored Tom Gibbons, and I arrived at the Legion headquarters a capacity crowd was in attendance. Dan has not yet put in an appearance on account of his two earlier speaking engagements.

Commander Manley insisted that I do some pinch hitting, and so gave a short sports talk. Dan Kelley then burst into the picture, and gave a swell talk on football and boxing.

Dan was particularly warm in his praise of the fine sportsmanship Holy Cross and Boston College displayed in their recent football game. Dan, you know, was one of the officials, and it wasn't necessary to call a single major penalty for any infractions of the rules. Which must have made the Brown Jug boys quite mad. Ill advised youngsters I would say.

On to Hartford

IT WAS MIDNIGHT when Kelley, Niland, Jones and myself got underway for Hartford by auto. Somebody should have hung a couple of lanterns in the tower of the old North Church to tip off the Winston scouts we were on our way.

I was fearful that if some cop stopped our car he would have thought we were a squad of prohibition agents out to knock some of the joy out of life. We decided to remain at Springfield for the night as Kelly and Niland wished to see Mitchell Hambro, one of their assistants, who had gone to represent them at a boxing show at Holyoke.

We breezed into Springfield at 2:15 a. m. Then to one of those hot cake and java places, then to the Kimball for the night. If I thought I was going to get some sleep, I was mistaken. Dan Kelley played the football season over, while he also told about some of the reforms he intends to introduce into boxing.

Bill Jones talked about all the swell dolls he had caught with his camera during divorce and alienation cases. I tried to get in a word about boxing now and then.

All this served to warm up Tom Niland who used to play the outfield for the old Cincinnati Reds. I was catching balls Tom was throwing in from the outfield when somebody remarked it was 5 a. m. So into the hay for four hours and then a meeting with Homer Rainault, Holyoke promoter.

A chat with Mill Moriarty former Springfield newspaper man and now a publicity director of much ability. Then a fast ride to the Connecticut State Capitol at Hartford where we met Tom Donahue, the one man Connecticut commission. Connecticut believes in placing the full responsibility of boxing and wrestling on the shoulders of one man.

TO THE Bond for lunch with Donahue Kelley, Niland Rainault, Moriarty, Jones, Bert Keane of the Hartford Courant and former Senator John F. Shea of Holyoke who wrote Notre Dame's "Victory March." Then to Charter Oak gym to be amazed by Winston's fine boxing.

Another session over the groceries at the Bond, some more tales of sports by Donahue, Kelley and Niland. Then into the hay. Still figuring out what a lot of extra fun one could jam into life if it wasn't necessary to sleep at all.

Women Invited to Irish-American Show

Women again will be admitted free to the fourth and final elimination amateur boxing show of the Irish-American A. C., to be held on Saturday at the Boston Arena under the auspices of the Irish-American A. C.

There will be boxing in five classes, 118, 135, 147, 160 pounds and heavyweight divisions. The winners of these classes will meet in the finals.

HUNK CANCELS REQUEST FOR AMBULANCE

El Paso, Tex., Dec. 7 (AP)—Pessimism over the prospects for victory over Southern California's football team Saturday was expressed today by Coach Heartley ("Hunk") Anderson of Notre Dame when the train bearing the Ramblers to Los Angeles passed El Paso.

"We shot the works against Army and probably cannot turn in another peak performance," Anderson said. "It will take a similar performance to beat the Trojans. They ought to take us."

Anderson said an ambulance had been ordered to meet the train at Tucson, Ariz., to remove Ray Brancheau, halfback, stricken with influenza after the squad left Chicago. Brancheau's condition had improved, however, Anderson said.

Other members of the squad who had been ill were reported rounding into condition. From persons on the train with the Notre Dame players it was learned Brancheau had been up most of yesterday, although suffering with a severe cold.

The squad will remain in Tucson two days planning to move into Los Angeles on the eve of the game. Secret practice sessions are scheduled for today and tomorrow.

TESTIMONIAL FOR HENDERSON

The boxing fraternity of the Hub will put on a testimonial show tonight at Jerry Buckley's Friend st. gymnasium for Billy Henderson, who lies ill in his Roxbury home.

Jack Sharkey, world's heavyweight champion, will don the gloves with a sparring partner as the feature boxing bout of the show. This is the first time that the champion has donned the gloves in public since he won the crown last September.

Ernie Schaaf, Andy Callahan, Jim Maloney, Tom Kirby, Tony Shucco and scores of the lesser lights among the local boxers will appear in exhibition bouts.

So What?

—By JOE MOONEY—

Looks like Babe Didrickson is America's best-known-lame-duck athlete today.

And it's the first time she could have found use for roller skates.

Shucks, stranger—the auto ain't never going to replace the horse anyhow.

If they want to know what she was doing with the car, Babe has a perfect alibi.

In a pinch, she could prove she was just hefting it.

HARVARD POLO OPENS MONDAY

With one of its strongest squads in years, well mounted and lined with veterans, the Harvard polo outfit looms up as one of the strongest college combinations in the East.

The Crimson will play its regular schedule, with four Saturday night games listed for January. But it also has objective meetings with Army, Princeton and Yale which will go far toward crowning the indoor champs this winter.

From all present indications the Crimson trio will line up for its opening game next Monday, an exhibition match with the Westwood Club, with three former captains of their respective freshman teams holding the starting positions.

Capt. F. S. Nicholas, who also led the Harvard team last winter as a junior, is at back, with Lowell Dillingham, '33, at No. 2 and T. J. Davis, last year's yearling leader, at No. 1. W. C. McGuichan '34, a member of the 1931 team, is also available for No. 1.

Harvard lost Crispin Cooke and William Luton, the regular forwards on the team which a year ago won seven of its 10 games. But this fall the squad has been larger than ever before, with 11 varsity candidates and nine freshmen reporting, and the vacancies are sure to be filled.

A. A. WOULD CUT PLAYERS IN ON PROFITS

By DAVIS J. WALSH,
International News Service Sports Editor.

Columbus, O., Dec. 7 (INS)—Convinced that it might face failure under the existing system that cost it $35,000 last season, the American Association was planning today to go definitely Communistic by permitting the players to share in the receipts without, however, sharing in the deficits.

The International League, another class AA organization, has been invited to join in the noble experiment and was given until ten o'clock tomorrow morning to reach a decision in the matter.

HERE'S THE PLAN

If the International's reply is unfavorable, the American Association then will face the question of going it alone or withdrawing the plan altogether, since going it alone may involve a cessation of the "little World's Series" between the two leagues

The plan, in brief, guarantees each player on the pennant-winning club at least $1000 each if the club wins the little world's series or at least $800 each, if his club loses this series.

The sum of $600 will go to each player on the second place club; $400 each to those who finish third; $200 each to those who finish fourth and $100 each to those who finish fifth.

"kitty" arrangement.

It would be necessary for the league to post a guarantee of $40,000 before the season opens in order to assure the carry out of the plan and the players' contract would be written accordingly.

The money would be raised by deducting two cents from each admission, after the ticket is purchased, and the fund established on the basis of a "kitty" arrangement.

MONTE WELLS AIDS BROOKLINE COACHING

WEALTHY TOWN HIGH HAS FINE TRACK SQUAD

By BILL CONNELL

A new perpetual motion machine has been found for the sports world at Brookline, in Monte Wells, erstwhile Winthrop high, Dartmouth and for four years, a B. A. A. hurdler.

A slim, quiet, academic personage is Mr. Wells of the Brookline high teaching staff. But after classes conclude again he becomes Monte of track note. And flits over the barriers with all the ease and grace, and pep as well of an enthusiastic young athlete.

Ten years of hurdling fail to satisfy Wells. And not one season more will be sufficient.

"I might as well keep on as long as I can win," chirped Monte today. "I enjoy hurdling as much as ever, so why quit? I suppose the ordinary thing would have been to retire when I left Dartmouth. But I'm still at it."

Track Coach Tom Hines has a large and active squad working out daily in the area in front of the high school. Wells helps with the coaching, and the presence at practice of the champion has attracted many boys who otherwise would not bother with the sport.

REAL AMATEUR

Wells' not only is a track fanatic, but he's one of the nation's real amateurs. They wanted to give him an assistant coach's salary at the high school. He was helping and deserved the money. Monte refused. It might hurt his amateur standing.

But that didn't keep him away from practice. He works out with the boys many afternoons. Practice and teaching are all in fun with him. He's a real simon pure.

He offered to teach any boys who were interested in hurdling this fall. So a couple of afternoons each week he had 40-odd boys drilling over the sticks.

Now Wells has been hurdling for ten years, so might be expected to weary of the work. He ran for Winthrop High for two years. Then for Dartmouth for four years more. And for the B. A. A. since leaving Dartmouth, four years back.

TEACHES MATH'S

Teaching at Roxbury school, an exclusive institution which prepares most of its students for Yale, occupied him until this fall, when he came to Brookline High to teach mathematics.

For a time he thought of staying out of hurdles. But they say a track man is never cured. And it's true of Wells. As Tennyson chirped, men may come and go, but trackmen go on forever. Well, Tennyson might have said that.

Tom Hines has hopes for a very good season. Hines, who has developed a flock of fine runners, has one sure point winner in Alan Swartz, who should put the shot 50 feet this season. When he isn't shot putting he can high jump and hurdle.

Tod Plotki, ace broad jumper, and high jumper and hurdler of ability, is a capable member of the track squad. Tod's brother, Ralph, is a fine broad jumper.

Jim Johnson in the dash, and Joe Enright in the 600 are potential stars. Irv Perkins, 300 and dash; Abe Aronson, 1000; Lawrence Trainor, 600, can be in on the point scoring.

HINES' SON IN SQUAD

Coach Hines has a new interest in track this season. His son, James, is a sophomore at Brookline high, and an excellent 600-yard prospect. Jim has the smooth motion of a fine runner, is long legged and will become a standout trackman before he quits high school.

Brookline will have a new track soon. The old outdoor saucer finally surrendered to the elements. Specifications have been completed for a new oval. When this is finished it will give the Brookline boys the big advantage of training outodors.

The Truth About Dede Klein

Dade Klein

By PERCY JACKSON

Although but 23 years old, Dede Klein has been playing around pro hockey since the days when Art Ross was in his prime.

Dede is rather a large lad. And getting larger. Whenever he gets an invitation to mount the Fairbanks he exhibits a simpering coyness quite unique in such a vast assemblage.

He likes his meat raw and lean Fats are among the missing. Potatoes get barely a cool nod from the svelte right winger. Anything that contains calories is taboo. In fact anything that might go to waist.

Percy Jackson

He is variously called Dede, Moose, Jumbo and Shifty. Of these I like Shifty best. It's so impossible.

That weird, wailing sound that pervades the Garden on game nights is merely the Moose blowing his horn. How he can moan. The ice is never smooth on his lane. That puck develops wings whenever ne tries to lay a stick on it. The which fly out and trip him. He has even blamed me when he did not score.

He's not exactly a Beau Brummel. The only fresh thing he wears is a grey hat. He is really a connoisseur of grey hats. Always has a supply of them, although I never saw him buy one. He must be a collector, too.

His suits bear an extraordinary resemblance to union-made overalls. He throws them away before they get their first press His penchant for loud ties is only an effort to attract attention from the rest of the ensemble.

The Moose can be a rough sort of guy on occasion. Earl Seibert, now with the Rangers, can testify to that. "Si" tried to rough my roomie one evening at Springfield. Earl landed in the hospital. The medicos had to use a sewing machine to tie the raw edges together.

In the off season Jumbo hies himself back to dear old Saskatoon . . . and the girl friend. There he is just a well known man about town. Always in his car. In the days before he was the idol of the Can-Am League he used to work in an ice cream parlor. That's where he laid the foundation for that magnificent portico.

Moose is a very pleasant bed fellow. His nose is roman except that there's a dent where there should be a hump. This peculiar structure has resulted in an instrument capable of emitting noises with the timbre of a trumpet and the volume of a steam calliope.

Passing the Puck

By BILL GRIMES

The Bruins and the Rangers are still racing along neck and neck out in front of the other two American division clubs. The Bruins took the measure of the Americans to win their fifth game of the season while the Rangers were disposing of Les Canadiens.

After seven games, Nels Stewart finally got a break last night. He has been playing in extreme hard luck ever since he joined the Bruins or he would be well up among the leading scorers. Ne's apparently has been trying to make too many plays after getting into scoring position and because his passes were not completed, he has looked bad. Once Stewart starts to click he will be the idol of the fans.

Manager Art Ross used Perk Galbraith on the first and second lines last night. Galbraith has plenty of fight and speed and he is too valuable to hold down a seat on the bench.

Red Beattie, Joe Lamb, Marty Barry and Eddie Shore featured last night. Beattie turned in his best game of the season at home and apparently has hit his 1930-31 stride, while Lamb, Barry and Shore were on the go every moment.

Rollie Martin missed a fine opportunity to put the Americans out in front in the first period, during a three man attack with Rabbit McVeigh and Normie Himes. Martin received a pass from Himes and had Tiny beaten, but in his haste to score missed the net completely.

Red Dutton went beserk in the third period. After a mixup with Galbraith, Red accused the Bruin of trying to crack him on his broken thumb and when he reached the penalty box, he put the blast on Manager Art Ross.

After a couple of weeks of dickering, Myles Lane has come to terms with owners of the Bruin Cubs. Lane will be in uniform tomorrow night in Providence and will make his initial home appearance against the Rhode Island Reds on Saturday.

Rollie Martin, the clever right winger with Americans, is a younger brother of the famous Foley Martin, who was one of the most popular players ever connected with the Pacific Coast League. Foley died suddenly from blood poisoning, and he was esteemed so highly that his number was never worn again.

The New York Americans pulled a new wrinkle when they made the trip from New York by boat. With the exception of Percy Ryan, the trainer, the entire party enjoyed the boat ride. Percy thought he was sea sick before hte ship left the dock in New York.

The Americans are all loud in the praise of Joe Simpson as a manager and are fighting to get into the play-offs as much for his sake as their own.

Two Games Carded for Boston Eleven

Boston's pro soccer eleven will get back into action this week-end, according to the schedule released by Sam Fletcher, secretary of the league.

The Boston eleven will travel to Pawtucket Saturday, where it will meet the league leading Rangers, and on Saturday it will journey to Fall River, where it is to oppose the Marksmen.

Chicago, Dec. 7 (AP) — Reports had it today that H. O. (Pat) Page, Sr. former University of Chicago star athlete and present assistant to A. A. Stagg, had become the leading candidate to succeed the "old man," as the Maroons' head football coach.

George Veenker, head coach at Iowa State College under Thomas N. Metcalf, who will replace Stagg as athletic director at Chicago next year, is expected to remain at the Iowa institution, having been named to succeed Metcalf. This left Page as the foremost choice among the guessers.

It also was reported that Jimmy Phelan, who gave Purdue an undisputed gridiron title in 1929, before going to the University of Washington, also was in line for consideration. Phelan has said he would leave Washington if a suitable opportunity were offered.

27 GAMES ON B. C. BASEBALL SCHEDULE

By [illegible]E MOONEY

A 27-game Boston College varsity baseball for 1933 schedule was announced at University Heights today. Apart from the fact that this schedule for the Eagle diamond addicts is longer than any in recent years, it furnishes further testimony to the now generally recognized theory that Boston College has arrived in the "big leagues" among the colleges and universities in the East.

Almost half the B. C. baseball season will be spent on diamonds away from home. On two occasions the Eagles will journey to New Hampshire for games with Dartmouth and New Hampshire In a three-day series, late in May, the Maroon and Gold batters swing into New York to test the big town's diamond strength in tilts with Manhattan, New York University and Fordham on successive afternoons.

In fact, the Eagle road routine calls for 10 successive games away from the home lot. Only one break occurs, when Holy Cross comes to Newton for the first game of the regular two-game series.

Virtually every college except Harvard in New England is listed on the schedule issued today. And B. C. will have a taste of the brand of baseball competition developed across the Charles when they open their season with the Harvard graduates.

Fordham enjoys a double date on the B. C. schedule, playing at Newton on April 19, [illegible] entertaining B. C. at New [illegible]k on May 27. The schedule:

April 15, Harvard Graduates; 19, Fordham University; 22, Vermont University; 28, Bates College; 29, Boston University. May 5, Mt. St. Mary's College; 6, Boston College Alumni; 9, William & Mary College; 10, Providence College; 12, Georgetown University; 13, Villanova College; 16, Dartmouth College*; 18, Syracuse University; 19, Middlebury College; 20, Manhattan College; 23, Seton Hall College; 25, Manhattan College*; 26, New York University*; 27, Fordham University*; May 30, Holy Cross College*, June 1, Springfield College*; 3, Providence College*" 10, University of New Hampshire*; 12, Holy Cross College; 16, Tufts College*; 17, Williams College*; 20, Holy Cross College*.

HAMPDEN'S "CYRANO" SUPERB

Stirring Reality in Full Measure in His Presentation of Hero of 17th Century France

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

If a prediction may be ventured, and this with all due respect to Walter Hampden's grim decision, that excellent artist will not dismiss "Cyrano de Bergerac" from his repertoire as lightly as expressly stated. When all is said and done, there still remains the patient attendant upon good drama to be heard and he, in fulsome fashion, is making it plainly evident at the Colonial that "Cyrano" is not an old fashioned bit of dramaturgy ready for the scrap heap. This message must be ringing upon the Hampden ear drums at every performance.

Walter Hampden

There is little new that may be said of Rostand's heroic comedy; its praises have been sung by critics and apostles of good drama for more than a generation. The more venturesome have ranked it with Shakespeare's romantic comedies. And, so as its niche in the theater appears to be pretty well established any present day comment upon its qualities must naturally be concerned chiefly with the manner of its presentation and its fidelity, through translation and adaptation, to the original text. Mr. Hampden has been faithful unto these things. He has not stinted in production, nor in personnel; he has turned it into good entertainment by the simple devices of the theater. Mr. Hampden's own performance is one of those staggering tasks from which a less valiant artist would recoil. It is a two-man job rolled into one.

Good Tonic for All

In spite of its exquisite beauty, its rich romance and its rough and ready humors, it may well be wondered how the swaggering Cyrano might fare in these days of sophistication if it were not for Mr. Hampden's authority in speech and action. 'Tis true, Cyrano is an old friend of this master of diction. Perhaps that tells the story of the crowded balconies, and even the gallery, at the Colonial. The Cyrano of Walter Hampden is good for the student, for the man in the street, and for the casual passer-by with a mind keyed up to the better items of drama fare, even if not always the jolliest. There is a full measure of stirring reality in Mr. Hampden's performance. He takes you back to 17th Century France and tosses you about with the truculent Cadets of Gascoigne until you are about willing to believe you are really in the midst of Cyrano's wild days and nights. The fall of the curtain brings you back to earth, but you have not missed the spell of the Hampden allurement.

The love of Cyrano for Roxane is an old story, but Mr. Hampden makes it an enduring one. He has, with the usual good sense which has marked his journey to artistic heights, afforded himself suitable support. Katharine Warren becomes an attractive Roxane with no great effort, and John D. Seymour, as the warm hearted but intellectually dull Christian, does all that could be expected of an actor whose assignment is to play lover to the tune of his rival's words and music.

Always Sincere

If Mr. Hampden is sincere, and that has never been questioned, these are the last days in which you may take measure of "Cyrano de Bergerac." Unquestionably he means what he says, but there is always the call of the people, and if you do not take much stock in that, there still remains the lure of the box office. The last of Mr. Hampden as Cyrano? That, I believe, should be listed as one of the drama's most beneficent improbabilities.

Beal Hober at Jordan Hall

By MOSES SMITH

Beal Hober, soprano, sang at Jordan Hall last night, making her first appearance in Boston. A well-arranged program included four lieder by Schubert, a group of five by Wolf and Brahms, a group in English by Michael Head and Roger Quilter, two French songs and one in Italian. A final group of songs in English consisted of two numbers by Russian composers and two presumably by Americans, the omission of which would scarcely have been considered a tragedy.

This program offered Miss Hober opportunity to display a voice of beautiful, indeed extraordinary quality; a voice, also, of remarkable natural expressiveness and variety of tone color. Her obvious musical gifts are of almost intuitive character, if the listener may judge. Though occasionally her pronunciation of the foreign languages—especially French—was none too accurate, her enunciation was meticulously clear. The works in English were best performed, both as to singing style and interpretation of the text. The singer, either for temperamental reasons or because of lack of insight, did not establish a mood in the French songs.

As a whole, however, this was an unusual debut, presenting unmistakable talent. But it was clear that the singer has marked technical deficiencies, notably in the matter of breathing. And, naturally, her interpretations lack the depth which maturity will bring.

Edwin McArthur played remarkable accompaniments—remarkable as pianism and because of their sympathy with the singer. A large audience applauded most enthusiastically.

Ernest Arthur Grenier

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

Hundreds are standing today, wet eyed, at the bier of Ernest A. Grenier, paying a last tribute to a great and good friend and endearing character. Ernie Grenier was the treasurer of the Colonial theater, a position of trust which he had faithfully served since 1920. It was my privilege, less than a year ago, to hear Florenz Ziegfeld declare that Mr. Grenier was the most efficient box office man in America—and Mr. Ziegfeld was not given to idle praise. Ernie was strictly of the theater; he advanced, step by step, from gallery program boy to treasurer, and not once along that journey was there ever anything but helpful good nature reflected in his contacts with brother employes or with the theater's customers. His smile and cheerful greeting to Colonial patrons was as much a box office fixture as the brass grill behind which he toiled. To the theater goer, Erlanger, Belasco, Ziegfeld and the Shuberts are just names in the drama's daily routine; but Ernie Grenier was a personality. He stood out as friend and counsellor, a man of infinite courtesy at trying times and one who could always smile when things went dead wrong. He will be missed.

Russell Mack Film Is Held Over at Gayety

"The All American," one of the greatest of all the football pictures, proved so popular the first part of the week as featured on the Gayety screen, that Manager Grover Burkhardt is holding it over, through next Saturday. This film was directed by Russell Mack, native of Providence and one of the finest of Hollywood's directors. The co-feature, beginning tomorrow, will be "The Crooner," with David Manners and Ann Dvorak. There will be five new acts of vaudeville also.

DeMille's Favorite

Policy Changes

Mgr. Al Somerby of the Bowdoin announces a broadening of his motion picture policy. Instead of limiting itself to productions of a single Hollywood studio the Bowdoin hereafter will present selected films from among the output of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, United Artists, Paramount, Warner Bros., Fox, Columbia, First National and RKO companies. Mgr. Somerby will continue his policy of vaudeville.

TWO NEW LEADING MEN FOR THE SCREEN

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Motion Picture Editor Universal Service

Copyright, 1932, by Universal Service, Inc.

Los Angeles, Dec. 7—Two new leading men are promised us by David Selznick who returned yesterday from New York. One is "Chick" Chandler and he has been appearing in "The Great Magoo" in New York. Says David "Chandler is a cross between Lee Tracy and James Cagney."

We say we're from Missouri and must be shown. If Mr. "Chick" Chandler can take at the box office like Tracy and Cagney it's money in the bank for radio. We want to take a look at him.

Louella O. Parsons

David also signed Patrick Ahearn, young English leading man and brother of Brian Ahearn who was out here with Katharine Cornell in "The Barretts of Wimpole Street." If the younger Ahearn is anything like his brother he'll have all the girls voting for him.

A Job for Tone

The loud lament of Franchot Tone that he has been collecting his salary at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer without working need no longer worry him. Mr. Tone, a successful New York actor and a member of the Little Theater Guild, was brought out here to play opposite Jean Harlow in "Nora." Then "Nora" became too censorable and was side-tracked for story changes and there was no change in sight. Mr. Tone's screen debut now will be as Joan Crawford's brother in her next picture. So far this story has no title since "Turn About" is the name of another story owned by M-G-M.

Grand Guignol Plays

Interesting that Hollywood is to have the Grand Guignol plays. The experiment was tried in New York about six years ago with excellent success. But it remains for George K. Arthur to introduce these French thrillers to Hollywood. George is back from England and very enthusiastic over presenting the Grand Guignol at the Music Box Theater December 25. He plans to present four plays during the period of two weeks. George has already been approached by two agents to make two-reelers of these plays.

Chatter in Hollywood:

Someone very close to Ronald Colman says that when he finishes "Masquerader" he is leaving Hollywood. "Ronald," says my informant, "is packing up his belongings and selling certain of his possessions with an idea of taking his permanent departure from the town where he has become famous." A difference of opinion with Samuel Goldwyn and a desire to go on the stage is said to have motivated Mr. Colman and made him decide to shake the Hollywood dust from his feet. He is being very quiet about these plans and is not discussing his future with anyone.

Josephine Lands

It has taken Josephine Whittell a full year to land the sort of job she wants. It isn't so easy, you see, to get into the movies, even with stage experience. Miss Whittell has one of the important roles in "The Infernal Machine" at the Fox studio. She plays an opera singer and it gives her the same sort of chance as Minna Gombell had in "Bad Girl." "The Infernal Machine" by Marcel Varnell has as its featured players, Genevieve Tobin and Chester Morris. Genevieve seems glad to be home again after spending nearly three months making the Gloria Swanson picture. Wonder when Gloria's film will be released?

A Line or Two:

Barbara Stanwyck's red locks for "Baby Face," her next picture, may be permanent. They are so becoming. "Turn About," by Thorne Smith, one of the most fantastic and amusing books ever written, is being considered for a musical comedy by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Regis Toomey has put his name to a contract to play opposite Loretta Young and Lyle Talbot in "She Had to Say Yes." When Paramount gets "Passage to Paradise" all ready Paul Sloan will direct it. I use the word "when" because up to now ten writers have been doing the sequences. Stephen Roberts starts work immediately on the Paramount lot directing "The Eagle and the Hawk," a coming air thriller. Wallace Beery flew to his cabin in the high Sierras to bring Carol Ann and Mrs. Beery home before the snow falls. When snow reaches that region of the world it is difficult to get out. Charles Laughton will spend Christmas in London. He returns to Paramount in the spring. Lila Lee is on the Fox lot. She is there for the femme role in "Face in the Sky."

Publix Officials Take Over New Positions

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

The first changes of personnel in the new Publix organization have just been put into effect. Some affect the managerial end, others publicity and exploitation. From the Metropolitan staff Jack Saef, one of the ablest of the younger talent, is promoted to be publicity representative for the Capitol in Worcester. John McConville goes from the Met to the Scollay, taking the place of William E. Badgett, promoted from publicity to be assistant manager at the Fenway, which tomorrow becomes a first-run house with the Paramount.

JAILER RESIGNS IN SHAKEUP AT PORTSMOUTH

Portsmouth, N. H., Dec. 7.—A "shakeup" took place at Portsmouth jail today as a result of the escape of ten prisoners November 26. The "shakeup" was ordered by Atty. Gen. Francis W. Johnston of Concord, who called in the county commissioners and told them he wanted action.

Oliver W. Philbrick, the jailer, resigned today. His resignation becomes effective next Saturday. It is understood his successor will be named before the end of the week and that he will be chosen by the attorney-general.

Paul Larrabee, a former state motorcycle policeman, has been appointed night watchman and will begin his duties at once.

In addition, the county commissioners have ordered several floodlights installed by means of which the jail yard will be as light as day during the entire night.

Jailer Philbrick will go back to farming when he quits his post on Saturday. Whether he was told he would be ousted if he did not resign could not be learned, but in some quarters it was said the resignation was purely voluntary. He will retain his title as deputy sheriff.

Seven of the prisoners who escaped at that time are still at large.

Strike May Be Averted

Dublin, Irish Free State, Dec. 7 (AP)—Some hope that the threatened general strike of railway employes in the Irish Free State may be averted arose today from discussions between labor leaders and Sean Lemass, minister of industry and commerce.

'A MAN MUST FIGHT' :-: Former World's Champion Tells of His Battles :-: By Gene Tunney

SYNOPSIS

"The Day" (September 23, 1926) has arrived for Tunney. Early that afternoon he flew from his Stroudsburg training camp to Philadelphia, was air-sick all the way, was "white as a sheet" at weighing-in, but went calmly to sleep afterwards, which sleep was interrupted by a visit from Billy Gibson, "Boo Boo" Hoff and a lawyer. This led to an unpleasant scene late that afternoon, but Gene regained his composure.

By GENE TUNNEY

I arrived at the Arena at the time appointed by Tex Rickard. I got myself in readiness for the ring. While sitting in the dressing room we had a visit from Chairman Weiner and Frank Reilly, the referee.

Reilly said: "In order to save time in the ring, I've come to tell you that we are going to box according to the rules of the Pennsylvania Boxing Commission. You have read them, haven't you?"

"Yes," I answered.

"Well then, you understand what they are."

"I understand that the rabbit and kidney blows are barred. Am I right?" I asked.

"Yes, they are," he replied.

"How many times are you going to warn the man who uses either of these foul blows before you disqualify him?" I asked.

With a quick, belligerent glance and in a raised voice Reilly said, "This ain't gonna be no pink tea. This is gonna be a fight for the heavyweight championship of the world."

"So I have read in the papers," I remarked. "But since you've come in to discuss the rules, I would like to know all about them, and just what you consider a foul or fair blow. It makes no difference to me if we go in there without gloves, just so I know beforehand."

"TELL IT TO JACK"

In increasing anger and restrained voice, pointing his finger at me he said: "Lissen, I want you to understand that I don't want squawks from the loser when this fight is over."

"Go over and tell that to Dempsey. He will be more interested in what the loser has to say than I," I replied.

Reilly, followed by the commissioner, left the room in a huff. As they went, both Bronson and Fink broke into a laugh.

I would like to say that though Reilly had absorbed the atmosphere of Philadelphia and believed that I would be knocked out quickly, he was impartial at all times during the fight. No arbiter of any story ever officiated more honestly or conscientiously than Reilly.

Though Dempsey used the rabbit blow all through the contest, it was not because of absence of warning from Reilly. Dempsey simply ignored repeated warnings in the early rounds. Seeing they were doing no apparent damage, Reilly did not notice them in the later rounds. It is hard to stop a contest for the world's heavyweight championship because of so slight an infraction. Dempsey realized this.

Jack kept me waiting in the ring. Not purposely, however. He had got to the arena late.

Rickard upon meeting him at the gate said, "Jack, for God's sake, hurry up. It is going to rain any minute and here we have all these people in. What're we ever goin' to do?"

Dempsey, rushing to his dressing room, said, "Don't worry about that rain, Tex. This guy ain't goin' over two rounds, anyway."

As Dempsey entered the ring I got up from the stool and met him as he climbed through the ropes. I said, "Hello, Champion!"

He answered, "Hello, Gene."

DEMPSEY TRIES HOOK

"May the better man win," I said.

"Yeh—yeh," he muttered as he went to his corner.

It had been provided by the Boxing Commission that the bandages which they were to furnish were to be put on in the ring. This was done to avoid any talk of loaded bandages. Jack hurriedly wound his bandages on his hands and waited for me to finish with mine. I deliberately delayed the bandaging as long as possible, sometimes re-winding several strands. I kidded with his seconds, Philadelphia Jack O'Brien and Gus Wilson, who were watching my bandaging.

"Too bad, Jack," I said, "that you are seconding a loser tonight."

"Yeah?" replied O'Brien, not quite comprehending. Dempsey had kept me waiting. I did not mind. But I knew that he would resent this waiting. He seemed to [illegible] The fight was on!

Dempsey cautiously advanced to meet me in the center of the ring. After a little fiddling he started a left hook which I leaned outside of. We clinched and were broken by the referee. Again Dempsey led a left hook, this time a little wider than the first. Again I slipped it by leaning outside. We clinched again. There was little infighting. Dempsey was warming now to the business of defending his championship. I was cautiously awaiting the chance in accordance with my plan.

After some more fiddling and a feint by me, Dempsey responded with another left hook, which was a little wider and longer than the last. This time I stepped outside.

WAITS FOR OPENING

In the front row sat Mike Trant, of the Chicago Police Department, Dempsey's bodyguard. Mike did not like me—he had read in the newspapers that much of my spare time had been given to books. That in Mike's opinion, was a proof of weakness.

"Come on, Jack," he bellowed, "knock the big sissy into my lap."

With my back to the ropes I slipped and blocked five or six blows that he threw in my direction as he followed me. Neither of us had yet landed a clean blow. Both had landed several light blows in the clinches.

The referee was between us now. I circled around the referee to the center of the ring, and Dempsey, following on his toes, leaned slightly forward as though teetering off balance. I sensed he was thinking that he would [illegible] left hook in order to [illegible] me as I started back when he led it.

My object in stepping outside and backing up was to make the champion believe I was nervous and afraid. This was different from the brazenness of my statements before the fight. A new psychology altogether. I hoped by making him think I was scared of him, he would get a little anxious to hit me and finish the job. I wanted him to become a little over-confident.

BLOW THAT WON

We were out in the center of the ring now. The moment had arrived for me to come out of my shell and attempt to win the fight.

I felt comfortable as I dug my right heel into the canvas for a firm foothold. I feinted him once; he blinked. I feinted him again. Thinking that I was again going to step outside, [illegible] he took an extra hitch to give it more length as he started his left hook.

As it came, I stepped in, instead of out, and with everything I had in my right hand hit Jack on the cheek bone. Shucks, too high for a knockout! His knees sagged, and in the short exchange that followed he was very unsteady and dazed.

He later said that if I had followed up to his advantage I would have won the fight in the first round. I did follow up my advantage but Jack had not been 10 years in the ring for nothing. He covered.

That first blow won the fight for me. Jack was very ineffective after that. He hit me but one hard blow during the whole contest; it was a terrific left hook in the sixth round, landing on my "Adam's apple."

The cartilage was pushed into my throat and lacerated the mucous membrane on the side. I coughed blood and was hoarse for several days.

In a truly remarkable chapter, Tunney will chronicle next his visit to Dempsey's hotel quarters the day after the Sesqui ring classic and how "practically over-night I became the most unpopular of all the heavyweight champions."

Move to Turn Hippodrome Into Beer Garden Recalls Good Old Days

By ROBERT E. ROGERS

So they're going to turn the old Hippodrome into a beer garden! No, not in Boston. In New York. Sixth avenue, the block between 43d and 44th streets?

R. E. ROGERS

And what has that to do with Boston, or a column written for a Boston newspaper?

Well, nothing perhaps, if you're a youngster. If all you can remember are the movies. If your memory only goes back to D. W. Griffith and "The Birth of a Nation," in the days when Mary Pickford was young and the Gish girls were extras and John Bunny and Flora Finch furnished the silent comedy.

But if you're just a little older you will remember the days when, if you went to New York, you went to the Hippodrome. At least on the first visit. Later, maybe, you passed it up for the Casino. But you went at least once. It would not do to go back to Boston, or East Burlap, or wherever you came from, and have to admit that you hadn't been to the biggest theater in America, perhaps in the world. You had to see the Hippodrome, even if you passed up the Aquarium, the Statue of Liberty and Grant's Tomb.

As Big as All Out-Doors

The paper says that the Hippodrome was "once the largest in the country," implying that now there are larger. I have always been one to believe press-agents with a naive and wide-eyed faith. But I can't believe that! The man who wrote that surely could never have been in the Hippodrome. Why, it was as big as all out-doors. And inside it was even bigger.

There was where you saw a show that was a combination of Barnum and Bailey's circus, one of Keith's vaudevilles, a swell musical comedy, and a Drury Lane Extravaganza. Perhaps you remember the first show when the house opened in 1903, that ran for Heaven knows how long. It was called "A Yankee Circus on Mars." It had strange scenery on the immense stage and a monstrous ballet with shining and fantastic costumes dancing to the music of a mammoth band.

And right in the middle of the show a real circus cut down in time but not in personnel—with elephants and horses and the most famous clown in the United States Marcelline. His stunt was helping the stage hands change sets for the circus acts. He was always running to help and tripping over the wooden ring or an unrolled carpet or a coil of rope and getting there just too late. I have always wished I knew what happened to him when the Hippodrome closed under film competition. I think he went to France, but I am not sure. Probably he is dead now. After all, that is nearly 30 years ago.

But neither the ballet nor the circus was the real thrill for which the out-of-towners were waiting. The hicks—even as you and I—to whom New York meant the Hippodrome, just as presently will mean Radio City and the new Roxy Theater. What we came for was the tank!

Tank and Girls Packed Big Kick

Toward the end of the show they opened up the big tank and presently down the great staircase came marching the girls of the ballet, the Lunar Guards in shining armor, rank upon rank, serried, perfectly aligned, unfaltering—down the steps, line upon line, down into the water, down out of sight completly. And we waited for bubbles, but they had not come up when the curtain fell.

Clever youngsters of today who read "Popular Mechanics" would know at once it was nothing but diving bells, but in the year 1903 or thereabouts, it was some sensation.

Sometimes it was a regiment of men soldiers that marched down. Once a whole company of horses went in. At least I seem to remember them kicking and splashing in the tank, but I rather doubt if they got them in the water.

Every once in so often they invented a new story and gave the ballet different dances, engaged some novelties in circus acts, found a new song for the tenor and the soprano to sing—like ants on that immense stage—but that was all. There was always the circus and Marcelline. And there were also the girls marching down into the tank and disappearing, to a buzz of juvenile, youthful and even adult astonishment. That is what one went to New York for—to say that one had been to the Hippodrome.

And now they are talking of redecorating it—and pretty musty and mildewed it must be by now—and opening it again as the biggest beer garden in New York, with music and entertainment. One sympathizes. One would like to see the old place open again to the happy middle class for whom it was created. Once there was a place on the Bowery called the Atlantic Garden. But that was long before my time. It was a place of the people, by the people and for the people. The anonymous promoters who wish to buy in the place would like to make it just that. Where the entertainment will be popular and the beer will be reasonable and there will be no double stars in "the New Yorker" signifying "better dress" or "dress obligatory." Just a place where the folks from the hinterland will want to go too because it is the real thing.

Plenty of Time for Reservations

I'm not making any reservations for New Year's Eve at the Hippodrome, y'understand. Nor for any other of the legal or customary holidays of 1932. Monday at the Capitol showed pretty much what we may expect from that curious biological curiosity, the lame duck. There will be plenty of time to redecorate the Hippodrome, I suspect, and to do a good job of it.

Nevertheless, even the news clipping, probably no truer than it needed to be, gives me something of a pleasant feeling. It is all a part of being young in New York a long, long time ago. Matinees of Maude Adams in "Peter Pan." The 7th Regiment parading down Fifth ave. in the sunny showers of an April afternoon. The fleet in the Hudson river. The buses up and down the avenue. The queer penny peep-shows in the arcades along Fourteenth st. The corner of Fifth ave. and Forty-second when the old Reservoir was still there, before the lions crouched on the steps of the library. Old King Cole in the Knickerbocker bar. When Times sq. was still officially Longacre. Eddie Foy at the Casino. Before Mr. O. O. McIntyre first set foot in Manhattan, which he was eventually to make famous . . .

But I seem to be getting into that gentleman's own strain. I mustn't. It's probably copyrighted—and besides, it's so mcintyring!

Order $1,100,000 for State Road Work

Gov. Ely and the council today authorized the public works department to spend up to $500,000 for new roads and up to $600,000 for construction in anticipation of the 1933 budget.

These amounts are about half what is usually allowed.

$7594 More Allowed Grove Hall School

An order of appropriation of an additional $7594 to Matthew Cummings Company, for erection of the high school at Grove Hall, Dorchester, was approved by Mayor Curley today. The money will defray expense of open blasting in foundation work and for extra concrete in footings and tunnel walls.

'RUSTY' The Most Exciting Serial You've Ever Read By Vera Brown

Thrilling Romance of a Boston Nurse

"Please, God, let him die! Let him die now!" prayed Jill. An immense terror gripped her. She felt she could not stay there at the operating table with all their eyes upon her.—From fascinating serial, "Rusty," which appears on this page today

Jill Stricken With Fear as She Sees the Face of a Wounded Man

HOW THE STORY STARTED

Starting life over again, Jill Mordant, beautiful red-headed nurse in a hospital, is trying to make a home for her brother, Ray. He has been serving a five year sentence in Michigan State Prison for a crime which "Black Leo" Lehman committed. Dr. John Slater, in love with Jill and her other friends at the hospital do not know about Ray. As Jill waits for her brother in the South Station, Parker Holden, well known Boston attorney, is struck by her unusual beauty. He sees her meet Ted Merkle, an old friend of Ray's. Merkle promises Jill he will let Ray alone and brother and sister spend their first day together. Jill tells Ray not to worry as they will go away "far off" together as soon as they can and begin life anew. Ray agrees that this time there would be no side-stepping. "Rusty" gets ready to go on night duty and her brother admires her in the neat nurse's uniform. A messenger hands Ray a note with $500 which he thinks comes from Merkle. Jill is invited to go swimming with Dr. Slater, who loves her.

Now Go On With the Story

"Has the great doctor turned you down, honey?" O'Day's voice was flippant but there was an edge to it.

Ordinarily Jill would have answered.

"Flat, and I'm heartbroken."

But tonight the words would not come. She murmured something about bandages and started to leave.

"You'll never land him mooning about like this. I've seen it tried and it didn't work. Look starry-eyed. That's your specialty."

"Thanks!" Jill was ashamed of herself. She should know better than to let O'Day get her angry.

Jill's mind was a jumble of worries and fears. She needed money badly. She wished O'Day would pay her the $15 she owed her. Marcia was an inveterate "borrower" from Slater down to George Gaffney, the oldest orderly.

Jill could not get up courage enough to ask her for the money. She tried to think of some pretext for needing it badly. It was going to be hard, keeping the apartment and looking after Ray—until he got a job. It would take planning. Thank goodness she did not need any clothes. The few she had would do.

Marcia grinned impishly at the other's evident preoccupation.

"Thinking about the new boy friend?" she asked.

Startled, Jill tried to feign lack of interest.

Then it had been Marcia she and Ray passed in the darkness. Jill [illegible]. There would be gossip, she supposed. How disappointed Marcia would be when she found the answer so simple.

LACERATED JEALOUSY

Fortunately for Jill, Gaffney put his head in the door to tell her she was wanted in operating room D.

She had been gone only a moment when Dr. Slater appeared again. Seeing that Marcia was alone, he looked frankly disappointed.

"Dr. Slater," the nurse asked, "do you know what is in this bottle?" Any pretext to get him to stay a moment. Slater took the small container from her hand.

"Haven't the slightest idea, O'Day," he said. "Better heave it out."

Marcia nodded. She knew perfectly well it was distilled water, but she was determined to talk to him for a moment.

"I'd give anything for a ride when we're through," she sighed. "Such heat! It is simply killing me!"

Then Slater, with man's complete stupidity, made the worst possible answer.

"Sorry," he said, his hand on the door. "I'd be glad to take you but I've got to see that Jill gets a breath of air."

He paused, occupied with his own thought.

"I say, O'Day, have you noticed she hasn't been looking well lately?"

Marcia's eyes blazed, but she tried to hide her chagrin.

"Perhaps she's worrying over her new boy friend." The girl tried to keep her voice light and casual. "They seemed pretty engrossed in each other this evening."

"Perhaps," was all he said.

Later that night Slater wondered about Marcia's malicious tongue. He knew she was jealous of Jill. A blind man could see that. But he felt that she would not stoop to a deliberate lie.

PLANNING AN APPEAL

Jill had told him she had a matter of business to attend to that day. He never questioned her for an instant, so that he put the whole thing from his mind.

As the night dragged on, Jill thought about Ray and their future. She turned over the matter of a suitable job until her head ached. Broken arms and broken legs. Jill worked away. Cut heads. An attempted suicide. Pretty girl, too. Ray must have work. He must be kept busy.

"It's his only salvation. And it must be interesting work to absorb him. He mustn't think about himself," she diagnosed.

But what? There seemed to be no answer at hand. Once she passed Dr. Slater in the hall. He smiled at her and gave her hand a quick squeeze as he caught it for a moment. It warmed her heart, made her feel safe. Suddenly she decided that in the morning when they went for the ride she would tell Dr. John everything. It would be better. He might help and she felt she could go no farther alone.

The decision made her happier. She glanced at her wrist-watch. Three a. m. Four more hours and she'd be off duty. She could hardly wait to unburden her heart to her friend now that she had made up her mind.

A POLICE CASE

Suddenly through the quiet of the early morning there was a shriek of police sirens.

Another bad accident. Jill stepped into operating room A and glanced quickly about to see that it was in order. Bandages, instruments, ev-

1 MILLION SUIT OVER 'FOOL'

In any kind of society there's nothing funny about $1,000,000 but that sum jingled merrily today in a legal matter growing out of the radio performances of a leading funny man—Ed Wynn "The Perfect Fool."

Writs attaching the National Broadcasting Co. and the Texas Co., sponsors of the Ed Wynn program for that sum were served today by a United States deputy marshal preliminary to a suit against the two concerns by the Uproar Co. of Massachusetts.

According to Bernard Berenson of 16 Court st., member of the law firm representing the Uproar Co. the uproar is over an alleged breach of contract by the National Broadcasting Co. and the alleged breach was brought about by the Texas Co.

The Uproar Co., said Berenson, is a publishing concern recently formed and it contracted with NBC for the right to publish Ed Wynn's radio programs, after they had been put on and to sell them to the public in pamphlet form.

When the Texas Co. heard of the arrangement, however, it stepped in and deposited a heavy, corporate foot on all the plans.

So-o-o-o, then the legal action was begun, according to Berenson.

Sergt. McBeth Ill, Goes on Retired List

Mayor Curley today approved the retirement papers of Sergt. William McBeth of the Athens st. police station, South Boston, who leaves the department because of ill health after 34 years of service.

11 Demoted Policemen Sue Chelsea Mayor

Mayor Lawrence T. Quigley of Chelsea was today made defendant in a bill in equity suit brought by eleven former policemen whom he demoted to reserve officers.

The suit was filed in Suffolk Superior Court and charged the Chelsea mayor with "conniving" with an attorney acting as his agent to "defraud" the officers of their legal redress for reinstatement and compensation.

John J. Hanlon headed the list of petitioners who requested the return of an agreement which was signed among themselves, claiming three words were fraudulently inserted to deny them their rights.

Later they demanded a public hearing. In the petition these officers allege Quigley sent a lawyer to them to act for them, while in reality he was employed by the mayor to act in his behalf.

The police officers, however, do not name the attorney they claim served as the mayor's agent. They do claim they were dissuaded from demanding a public hearing and urged to sign an agreement in which it was understood that "when and as we are reassigned to permanent duty then our (waiver of) right to compensation due us shall be abandoned."

The police officers allege that words "and if ever" were fraudulently inserted, creating a material alteration to the intent of the content of the agreement.

Penny Sale to Aid Xmas Basket Fund

A penny sale in aid of the Christmas basket fund will be conducted in St. Paul's Parish Hall, Mt. Auburn st., Cambridge, Monday at 8 p. m. Albert L. Mills, chairman of the general committee, is assisted by the church choir and all church societies. Many beautiful gifts will be offered at the sale.

20 SCOLDED FOR TICKET ABUSE

A drive by Boston Elevated Railway officials on misuse of pupils' tickets at the Dudley st. terminal resulted in the appearance today in Roxbury court of 20 boys and girls on a charge of evading fares by misuse of tickets.

At the suggestion of John T. Hughes, attorney for the Elevated, Judge Miles allowed the youths to plead nolo and freed them after a severe lecture.

Judge Miles pointed out to the youths that the Elevated lost $300,000 last year by issuing 6,000,000 pupils' tickets at a 5-cent rate.

DROP 5 MILLION ESTATE FIGHT

Mrs. Wilhemina Hoffman of Humphrey st., Swampscott, daughter of the late Jacob Benz, millionaire leather dealer, who sought to be appointed as special administrator of her father's $5,000,000 estate today in Salem probate court, withdrew in favor of the Security Trust Co. of Lynn.

Naming of the trust company as administrator was agreed upon by both sides.

Under the terms of the will, Mrs. Hoffman is to receive the income of $60,000 bequest; the balance to be given to the widow and another daughter.

Mayor 15½ Lbs. Shy Feels Like a Lark

Mayor Curley returned to City Hall today five and one-half pounds lighter than when he left that office recently for a visit to White Sulphur Springs, W. Va.

"I had a delightful trip," Mayor Curley said. "I took five and one-half pounds in five days and feel like a lark. Those hot sulphur baths were great!" His Honor now weighs 199 pounds.

Winthrop Police Chief in Crash

Police Chief William A. McNeil of Winthrop narrowly escaped injury today when his automobile crashed through the closed doors of a garage at 12 Herman st., Winthrop. Chief McNeill was on his way to police headquarters when the steering gear broke.

SCORES OF MOTHERS VIEW BODY OF MYSTERY GIRL

Girl About Town

—By ALYCE SIEMENS—

Your Day and Night!

There's no dawn half so bleak—
so gray
As the dawn when you're away.
There's no night quite so black—
so drear
As the night when you're not near.
So, for me, there's nothing right—
Nothing in the day—none of the night—
If you're not part of my day—
Part of my night.

DAUGHTERS ON MISSING LIST ARE SOUGHT

Taxi Driver Thought by Police to Know Victim's Name

While police are seeking a warrant for the arrest of the cab driver who took her to City Hospital early yesterday, scores of mothers viewed the body of an unidentified girl in City Hospital morgue today.

Many of these mothers of missing [illegible] with fear and hope in their hearts to view the corpse of one who died seeking to hide the shame of her downfall from the world.

They viewed the body first searchingly examining every feature for a resemblance to their own missing one. Then with eyes of pity and sorrow, passed out to continue their quest.

CLUES FROM CHELSEA

Police from Chelsea and surrounding cities also viewed the body as the sole clue to the identity of the girl who died following [illegible] singers who [illegible] tickets to dances sponsored by the Chelsea Elks.

Several Elks in charge of the Chelsea dances also viewed the body but so far no one has identified it.

Boston police said today they would seek a warrant to arrest John Syx of Cleveland st., Everett, the cab driver who carried the girl's body to the hospital as an accessory after the fact of an illegal operation.

BELIEVE DRIVER KNOWS

Syx still stuck to his story that the girl got into his cab on Columbus ave. and asked to be driven to Rutland sq. When he got there, he said the girl was dead.

Capt. Anderson in charge of the death investigation, said today:

"We believe the girl was placed in the cab dead. We think Syx is withholding important information and that he knows who the girl is."

Police expressed surprise that not one of the large number of men and women who viewed the body could identify it.

JOHN B. DORE DROPS DEAD

Atty. John B. Dore, member of the Cambridge Park Commission since 1921, and former deputy collector of internal revenue in Boston, collapsed and died suddenly today at his home in Porter rd., Cambridge.

Mr. Dore was in good health yesterday and went to his Pemberton sq. law offices as usual. He complained of no illness when he arose this morning and was preparing to go to his office when he collapsed.

He was an active member of the Boston City Club almost from its beginning and in 1922 was elected secretary. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Agnes Dore, and five children.

Was Censor's Face Red When He Looked Over Garb of These Beauties?

Ann Pritchard of one of the vaudeville teams the censor looked over and decided that her dress would not offend the Sunday show-goers in Boston theaters.

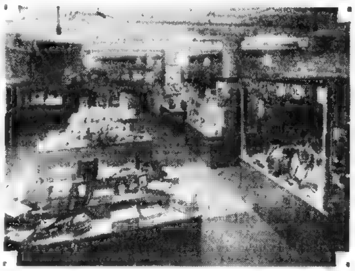
Beatrice of the vaudeville team of Marcy Brothers and Beatrice, whose scant attire and bare legs were objectionable to Boston censors, and she was made to cover up before the act was permitted to perform here on Sundays. Variety, show business weekly, has renewed the censor war here because 18 acts recently had to change dialogue and costumes.

GIVING IS MADE EASY HERE



Gilchrist's Gift Shop has gone Victorian in its decorations.

This shop, said by the management to be one of the finest in New England, covers the entire third floor of the corner building.

Gift shopping is simplified . . first decide the sort of thing the person to whom you are giving is interested in then make a bee-line for that section. If it's "entertaining," don't fail to see the "Brass Rail," where a jolly collection of high-ball accomplishments are gathered—shakers, cocktail glasses, serving trays and even canapes and new crispy crackers. If he or she is a smoker—then hie to the smokers' corner, where choice selections of cigarettes and cigars and new gadgets of all descriptions await you. If the gift is for a "home-lover" don't fail to see the section that radiates hospitality.

The dollar gift table has proven immensely popular with its wide scope of suggestions.

'PUSHBALL' FOR CO-EDS WEIGHT REDUCING

ANNE FOREN DOROTHY NEYLAN

This is not a publicity stunt—Oh, no. Eleanor Dobbins in charge of Boston University physical work among women, insists that the hip sizes can easily be reduced an inch by this "pushball" method of reduction. It's not strenuous. Just sensible exercise. That's the claim of Miss Dobbins. The girls at the Sargent school are determined to test the reducing claims. Here we have Anne Foren of Arlington and Dorothy Neylan of Boston.

400 AT RITES FOR GRENIER

With 400 persons attending the funeral of Ernest A. Grenier, late treasurer of the Colonial Theater, was held today with services in Eastman Funeral Home, Beacon st.

Religious services at both the funeral home and the grave in Forest Hills cemetery were conducted by Rabbi Harry Levi of Temple Israel. Masonic services at both places were conducted by members of Euclid Lodge, A. F. & A. M., of which the deceased was a member.

A stringed orchestra from the Colonial Theater and a woman soloist from the company now playing there assisted in the services at the funeral home.

Among persons of prominence in attendance at the funeral were Supt. of Police Michael H. Crowley, Stanton R. White, city censor, and former City Censor John M. Casey. Many persons connected with New England and New York theaters were present.

Two hundred floral tributes from many different cities attested the popularity of Mr. Grenier, who was known by theatrical people from one end of the country to the other.

Boy, 3, Killed; Auto Driver Arrested

Roger Burnham, three-year-old Lexington boy, failed to hear the warning of his playmate, Caroline Blake, four, and was crushed to death today under an automobile in Hancock st., Lexington.

Roger, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Burnham of Somerset st., Lexington, was playing with Caroline. They wandered from the Burnham backyard into Hancock st. and Roger ran from the sidewalk despite Caroline's pleas to be careful.

Roger ran into the path of an automobile operated by Joseph S. Hennessey, 67, of Massachusetts ave., Harvard. The child was pronounced dead upon arrival at Symes Arlington Hospital. Hennessey was held by Lexington police on a technical charge of manslaughter.

Woman Struck Crossing Street

Mrs. Lena Paulo, 26, of Prince st., North End, was struck and injured by an automobile, operated by Leonard H. Higginbottom of 714 Commonwealth ave., when she attempted to cross Hanover st., at Scollay sq. on a green light.

The woman was taken to the Haymarket Relief Hospital suffering from contusions of the abdomen, and abrasions of both knees.

2 Fires in House Cause State Probe

Chelsea police and State Fire Marshal James R. Rourke are investigating two fires which forced the family of John Sokolosky, of Williams st., Chelsea, to flee their home twice early today.

Sergt. Valentine Elmore and Fire Marshal Rourke found the hallway walls soaked with kerosene. Kerosene soaked rags were also found.

London Coroner Hints Sanders Was Slain

Abruptly adjourning the inquest into the death of Kent Churchill Sanders of West Roxbury, Harvard graduate, who died in a London hospital Sunday following injuries suffered at a drinking party, Coroner Purchase, in London, today hinted he would investigate the possibility of foul play.

In postponing the inquest until Friday, Coroner Purchase said.

"I am not going to deal with the matter finally today. There is another line which could be followed up. I shall have this other inquiry made in the meantime."

Sanders, whose widowed mother lives at 1874 Centre st., West Roxbury, enrolled as a special student in the University of London last September after resigning as teacher in the Belmont High School.

The party that preceded his fatal injuries was attended by several prominent persons including Sir Josiah Stamp, noted British economist, and Sir William Beveridge who may be called when the inquest is resumed.

Testimony at the inquest thus far tended to show that Sanders, who was "stupid with drink," according to Mrs. Bessie Coe, housekeeper at the place where the party was held fell as he was trying to climb down a pipe from the second floor to the garden below.

Although Sanders was known as a quiet and conservative bachelor among his friends, a London paper said he had a wife and child, who were on the way from America to join him for the Christmas holidays at the time of his death. Sanders' mother denies he was married.

A letter to Sanders, which may be opened at the inquest, is expected to reveal whether Sanders was married.

AID IS ASKED FOR RAILROADS

While tremendous amounts of public funds are expended for harbors, air lines, waterways and highways, railroads are stifled under unequal regulations between them and their competitors, C. E. Smith, vice-president of the New Haven railroad, told the Boston Rotary Club today.

"Although lack of traffic," he said, "is the principal reason for the railroads' financial difficulties at the present time, their performance is affected adversely by government laws and regulations which were enacted when conditions were different than at present, and which the Interstate Commerce Commission has asked Congress repeatedly to change.

"The railroads are affected adversely also by the unequal regulation of railroads and their principal competitors and by the subsidies granted by federal, state and local governments to competitors of the railroads."

Cardinal O'Connell 73 Tomorrow

His 73d birthday will be observed by Cardinal O'Connell tomorrow by pontificating a solemn high mass in the Cathedral of the Holy Cross which will be attended by a number of relatives and friends.

The cardinal will return to his home after the mass and spend the rest of the day visiting various Catholic institutions and in receiving the congratulations of friends and well-wishers from all parts of the world. He will be greeted by members of his family and relatives in the evening.

Tomorrow, in addition to being the cardinal's birthday, is the Feast of the Immaculate Conception and a holy day of obligation. Novenas and triduums in preparation for the feast have been held in scores of churches throughout the archdiocese.

Nurseryman Burned Battling Flames

A vain battle against a fire, which destroyed his shipping shed, cost E. H. Judkins, a nurseryman of 55 Speare st., Melrose, severe burns about the face, head and hands today. With the shipping shed was destroyed a large stock of trees, shrubs and plants.

Judkins, after sounding an alarm, attempted to extinguish the fire but it had gained too much headway.

WIDOW'S $600 STAKE IN RAID

Mrs. Bessie Baczewski, a widow, of 25 Blossom st., Lynn, is all done with keeping either home brew or the cash receipts thereof in crocks. This habit will cost her at least $400, and maybe more.

When police raided Mrs. Baczewski's home last night they found not only a large quantity of beer, but in one crock discovered $600 in cash and securities.

Today in Lynn court she was fined $100 for keeping liquor, and when welfare officials learned that she had already collected $300 for aid, they attached the $600. Steps will be taken immediately to recover all the aid paid Mrs. Baczewski.

Police Mop Up on Paper in Revere

In addition to handling law and order, Revere police today proved themselves efficient "scrubwomen."

At roll call this morning each officer was presented with a scraper and told to scrape from the telegraph and other kinds of poles in his district all political literature.

Revere is to hold its election next week, and during the night adherents of many of the candidates moved surreptitiously about the town pasting the printed ballyhoo about their officials.

Today the officers rolled their sleeves to the elbows and started their job of scribbling off the posters.

Let that COLD Play Only a One-Night Stand!

Drive a Cold Out of the System Overnight by Quick and Proper Treatment

Don't temporize with a cold. A cold—or grippe—can quickly turn into something else. Be quick—be zealous — in your treatment of a cold. A cold can be expelled overnight if you act promptly enough and use the right thing.

First, take a COLD remedy for a cold. A cold is a specific condition calling for a specific treatment. A cure-all is not a dependable remedy. A preparation that is good for a dozen ills and ailments can't be equally effective for a cold. Many popular remedies make the relief of a cold more difficult because they are constipating and also make the system acid.

Second, take a cold remedy administered internally. A cold is an internal infection and, as such, calls for internal treatment. Local, or outside applications, afford only temporary relief and do not reach the real seat of the trouble and do not prevent the infection from spreading within the system.

As Your Doctor Will Tell You—

Correct treatment for a cold is supplied in Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine. As your doctor will tell you, no better prescription for a cold could be written. First of all, Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine opens the bowels, the first requisite in the treatment of a cold. Second, it kills the cold germs in the system, drives out the poisonous infection and reduces the fever. Third, it relieves the headache and that grippy feeling. Fourth, it tones the entire system and fortifies against further attack.

Safe for Young and Old

Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine is safe for young and old to take. It contains no narcotics and does not produce any bad after-effects. It does not upset the stomach nauseate or make the head ring or swim. In dainty tablet form, it is convenient and pleasant to take, as well as effective. All over the world Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine is regarded as the standard cold remedy. These famous tablets come in handy, pocket size boxes and are sold by every drug store in America.

Overnight!

Get a box of Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine today and at the first sign of a cold, when the sneezing or headache begins, take a few of the tablets immediately. This is enough usually to stop the cold. Say "NO" to any dealer who tries to sell you a substitute.

A GAY GROUP of this season's debutantes gathered at the Copley-Plaza last evening for the presentation of Theodora Lawrence, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Hooper Lawrence, by her sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick S. Whiteside (Caroline Lawrence) of Marlborough st. . .

(Photo by Bachrach)

The ushers and their escorts were the first to arrive, among them the cool and lovely Lucy Rantoul in an enchanting frock of smooth blue satin . . . or perhaps it was her DEE-VINE figure that was so enchanting . . . She dances beautifully . . .

Jane Bancroft in White

JANE BANCROFT WAS ONE of the few maids of last year to attend . . . and very lovely she looked in her debutante gown of white trimmed with crystals . . .

Frances Lawrence, younger sister of Miss Theodora, was attired in orange crepe which set off her heavy dark hair and eyes very artistically . . . she is a very pretty girl . . .

Dainty Barbara Eustis flitted about in a white lace and she had a gay time drifting from the Lawrence ball to the hairdresser's party which was held elsewhere in the hotel . . . a crowd of debs crashed the latter to see the latest coiffures . . .

Radiant in Scarlet Gown

A BEAUTIFUL BRUNETTE, Marian Reggio, was radiant in scarlet, perfectly stunning . . . and

Among the blues also was Ellen Bottomley in the most beautiful midnight blue cire satin we have ever seen . . . a perfect love of a gown with tiny ruffles for sleeves . . . "Elizabeth" knows how to dress this lovely girl . . .

A Beautiful Manner and Individuality

ONE OF THE MOST ATTRACTIVE girls of this season, Ellen Pierce, arrived surrounded by swains as usual . . . Miss Pierce has lived in Paris and is poised, has a beautiful manner and individuality all her own . . . Best of all, she is INTERESTING . . .

To South Sea Island After Divorce

WE HEAR THAT Philip Saltonstall is living in Tahati in the South Seas . . . the fashionable place for certain men to go when free. Society was not surprised when Philip and the beautiful Katheryn Lapham Saltonstall were divorced last year, as the marriage was not a success, financially, from the start . . . Some maidens do not mind supporting their husbands . . . some do! Katheryn's father, Henry G. Lapham, one of Boston's richest men we imagine, has just presented his prodigal daughter with a handsome new estate in Chestnut Hill . . . maybe we will be hearing glad tidings soon . . . yes?

MARY VANCE

Perhaps Dicky (Richard) Waters is wishing that Santa Claus will present him with Mary Vance for Christmas as fiancee . . . we are hearing things . . .

Mrs. Clarence Hovey and Mrs. Archie Bolles staged a golden wedding party for their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Bolles of Commonwealth ave., recently . . . we hear it was SOME party and old man depression was left on the doorstep . . . One of Mrs. Richard Bolles' bridesmaids of 50 years ago was there, Miss Belle Hunt of Beacon Hill, a delightful lady.

Visiting in Philadelphia

'TIS SAID THAT "Libby" Locke, debutante daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Edwin A. Locke of Beacon st., will go in training to be a nurse at the Massachusetts General Hospital soon . . .

Mrs. Grafton Smith of Hamilton is making a visit in Philadelphia with friends . . . you know the beautiful Janice may lose a handsome income if she marries again but no doubt she receives hundreds of offers . . .

Mrs. Roosevelt at Community Sing

New York, Dec. 7 (AP)—Mrs. Franklin D Roosevelt attended last night one of Mrs. Frank A. Vanderbilt's weekly community sings in the Town Hall, where a week ago former Gov. Alfred E. Smith made his concert debut But Mrs. Roosevelt did not even lead the singing.

"Oh, I couldn't;" she exclaimed. "Why, I can't even carry a tune!"

Farmers Frolic for Charity at Somerset

The big event for tonight will be the large ball at the Somerset Hotel, entitled the Farmers Frolic, in aid of that noted charity, the Christopher Shop, in which a large group of Boston's society people are interested.

Mrs. Thomas Motley with Mrs. George E. Warren will receive the guests on their arrival. Mr. Duryea Jones and Mr. Philip K. Brown will officiate as the masters of ceremonies and will also act as barkers for the many side shows which have been arranged as additional attractions, not to mention the fashion show on which Messrs. Hickson Inc. have been giving their services in preparing and instucting a group of Boston's prettiest and most prominent debutantes.

Miss Katherine Balch, with Miss Sara Shurcliff and Miss Jean Lawson are at work all today superintending the elaborate decorative scheme for the event, the scenic parts of which have been painted by Mr. Dwight Shettler.

A large number of dinners are being given this evening before the affair. Miss Alice Wood, Miss Milda Allen, Miss Marian Ware and Miss Ellen O'Donnell are all inviting parties of friends at their respective homes. Mr. and Mrs. John R. Chapin with their daughter, Miss Martha Chapin, are giving the ushers' dinner at their home in Brookline, 32 gentlemen forming the corp of ushers.

Mr. and Mrs. Jonathan Brown, 3d, with Mr. and Mrs. Philip K. Brown, are also giving a large dinner for a group of the younger matrons and their husbands to be held at the residence of Mr. Jonathan Brown, after which they will proceed to the Somerset Hotel to join in the fun.

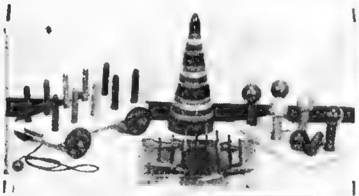
—Edited by MARGARET MATSON—

"THE HUNGER OF THE HANDS" is the way in which Miss Marjorie Van Slaght, instructor in the significance of play and play materials at the Garland School of Homemaking, expressed the need of small children for toys which they can handle rather than watch. Children crave to be doing things—pushing, pulling, putting together and taking apart. That is their best way of learning shape and color and size and number. According to Miss Van Slaght there are five essentials which parents should not overlook in choosing toys for children of one to six. They are: First, simplicity. Very important. Just the rudiments of shape without complication. Second, durability. Toys should be sturdy enough to take a good deal of punishment. Third, good construction. Parts should be put together in such manner that they will remain together. Fourth, good size. For tiny children, things should most certainly be too large to swallow. Further than that everything should be sufficiently large for chubby hands to manage easily. Sizes grade down with the years—the largest for the youngest child, and so on. Fifth good color. Dyes should be non-poisonous naturally (most of them are nowadays); and colors should be clearly defined—red from orange, orange from yellow and so forth. This is quite necessary in [illegible] the distinctions between colors.



Top, left—A progression of educational toys. Pegs, from large on the right, through the medium size, left, to the smaller in the center, and, behind, the Russian pyramid so highly recommended.

Lower—Two hammer toys. Left, the hammer peg board with a mallet—this for small children; right, the hammer and nail set which is somewhat more complicated. It grows with the child, so to speak, as he learns new things to do with it.

Marry Go Round

Christmas — Always the Acid Test

By HELEN ROWLAND

CHRISTMAS always has been and always will be the turning point in many a budding love affair. Little do the careful postmen and the jovial delivery men know how many hearts they break or how many romances they shatter when they hand out those fascinating, mysterious looking parcels around the holiday season.

Helen Rowland

This is because a holiday means so much to a woman—and so little to a man. And because every woman has a secret hunch, or intuition, that a man's love or regard for her can always be measured by his enthusiasm or indifference on Christmas day.

To a [illegible] there [illegible] man [illegible] from [illegible] something to HAPPEN. She is looking for a SIGN. And she knows [illegible] are the two infallible signs [illegible].

The first of these is a man's desire and determination to be WITH her especially on holidays and important days when he is hitting the high spots.

NOTHING [illegible] away from a woman [illegible] is interested, except [illegible] a broken [illegible]. From the moment she enters [illegible] acquaintance [illegible] clubs, his [illegible] social obligations [illegible] fades into [illegible] beside the chance to be in her company. If he [illegible] into [illegible] has to walk [illegible] or spend his last cent [illegible] less. That's why when a woman doesn't hear from or [illegible] on Christmas day [illegible] dead [illegible] that the [illegible].

The second sign of love in a man is his desire to DO things for a woman, to give her things, to surprise her and play Santa Claus to her. To make her happy!

The most [illegible] man on earth will suddenly forget his own comfort and become tender and solicitous as a mother when he falls in love. And the tightest tightwad will feel an impulse to open his pockets and buy you some nonsense like flowers or silk stockings or gloves or furs, while he's under the spell.

But don't for a moment imagine that the man who FORGETS you on Christmas and neglects to send you SOME idiotic token of his regard really loves you. He loves only himself!!! Or some other woman. You are no part of Christmas day to HIM. Whether it's his presence or his presents, Christmas day is the acid test.

Advice on Love

Girl Fears Heart Would Break

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I went with a girl for about a year and then because she [illegible] I [illegible]. She said if I left her it would [illegible] her heart. Since then I [illegible] with other girls and tried to forget her, but I can't. I know I [illegible] made a mistake, because I realize now I love her. [illegible] I [illegible] have to visit her because her mother knows I turned her down. I have seen her girl friend and asked with whom she is going now. She [illegible] with [illegible] we parted. I asked if [illegible] ever thinks of me or [illegible] of me. She said sometimes, but when she does she always cries. Do you think it would be possible for me to get her back? M. R.

Dear M. R.: No doubt the girl will be only too glad to make up with you, but frankly, wouldn't a reconciliation with so jealous and overbearing a man be a doubtful blessing? Men who enjoy brow-beating girls and playing the role of angry deity seem fit subjects for permanent farewells to me.

Household Hints

IF CHILDREN'S clothes are rinsed in water to which has been added an ounce of alum or sal ammoniac, they will be rendered fireproof until washed again.

SLEEPY SAM AND HIS LITTLE FRIENDS

Santa Claus gave Sleepy Sam to a little boy who wouldn't go to sleep. And do you know what happened? The little boy got so sleepy looking at Sleepy Sam that he, too, fell fast asleep! Very little kiddies just adore Sleepy Sam's two little friends because they are so soft and cuddly.

Santa and the Magic Doll -:- By Sigrid Arne

SYNOPSIS: A lazy Gnome sentenced to make Toyland's most beautiful doll obtains the aid of the Snow Princess and fashions a doll named Inga. Santa imposed the sentence because the Gnome had made Pinocchio an ugly clown.

CHAPTER III
INGA MEETS SANTA

The Gnome was a little afraid that Santa wouldn't think his doll so beautiful. So he hid her out [illegible] and went into the Toyshop to announce that he was ready to show what he had made.

"Bring her in," [illegible]. "I'll collect all the dolls and fairies. We'll let them [illegible]."

When all the people of Toyland had gathered under the huge Christmas tree in the center of the workshop the Gnome led in the beautiful Inga. She didn't know why they were all there, but it was such a gay looking company that she burst into the [illegible] smile and made a low [illegible] to them.

"Hooray!" shouted the Tin Soldier. "The Gnome wins."

"Hurrah," shouted the other dolls.

"Toot toot," blared the horns, and "Tinkle-tinkle" sang the pianos. Santa had to cover up his ears, there was so much noise.

And all the while poor little Pinocchio was standing in a corner, saying to himself "Just look what a beautiful doll that Gnome can make, and to think he made me as ugly as I am."

He looked so forlorn that Inga noticed him and she wanted to make him happy. She walked over to him and took his hand saying, "I know who you are. You make people happy when all the rest of us fail."

Pinocchio was so embarrassed at being noticed that he turned quite red and traced a pattern on the floor with the point of one of his shoes.

"[illegible] for Pinocchio," shouted the [illegible].

"[illegible] a dance," cried the dolls. So the little clown swung into one of those loose-jointed dances of his until it looked as though he'd lose an arm or a leg, and the whole Toyshop rocked with laughter.

Inga smiled but she didn't laugh. Maybe it was because the Snow Princess had helped make her. She seemed to see a little farther into the hearts of the toys around her. Dolls have hearts, you know.

Inga knew that Pinocchio was dancing because the dolls liked to see him, but she also knew that underneath his funny red and yellow suit he felt like crying.

So while he danced she wove a little tiny wreath of mistletoe leaves and when he finished she put them around his head, and said "This is for the King of Good Hearts." And Pinocchio, like the true gentleman, fell on his hands and kissed her hand just like a Knight.

All the dolls thought it was very pretty, but Santa's face softened and became very kind because he understood what Inga was thinking.

"The Gnome has done very well," he said. "Inga will be our Queen."

So everyone was happy, and the Gnome was happiest of all because it meant that he was not to be banished to the Ice Kingdom.

Inga was given a little white throne at one end of the long Toyshop and there she smiled down on all the rest with Pinocchio sitting at her feet telling her funny stories.

Tomorrow: The Witch.

Grooming

How to Get Rid of Wrinkle-Makers

FACIAL GYMNASTICS are the speediest of all wrinkle-makers. That wide-eyed baby who expresses surprise and wonder by lifting her eyebrows traces seams across her forehead. Frowning Fannie, glowering at life, scowling at her fellow creatures, pays for her intolerance by the twin gullies that form between her eyes. Many wrinkles are self-inflicted, wholly needless. Squinting more often causes turkey tracks than the ravages of time. The afflicted ones must ply the heavy skin builder, patting it in briskly. While the emollient remains on the skin surface they must do a bit of ironing with an ice cube.

Meals Coming Within Income of Husband--For 4 Persons

By MARTHA LEE

From Martha Lee's Wednesday Morning Broadcast Over Station WAAB

"WHAT PROPORTION of my husband's income should be spent for food for a family of four?" inquires a wide-awake young housekeeper from Atlantic.

And as she doesn't give her husband's income, the best I can do is to say that Uncle Sam's best budgeters tell us that 25 per cent of the income should be sufficient. But when the income is very small, it is not easy to keep food costs down to a quarter of the income, is it?

If you will keep an itemized account of everything you spend for food for one month, you can tell whether you are working within your budget or not. And at the end you will know that if you have overspent the amount you had set aside for foods, you must either spend less on food next month, or decrease the money set aside for other things.

In planning low-cost menus, be sure to take special thought of the food value of dried beans and peas, either baked or in purees, the cheaper cuts of meat, such as brisket, the lower round, chuck, shoulder and flank, fish and cheese which give us inexpensive tissue building material, baked potatoes, cabbage, the root-vegetables and spinach. These are comparatively cheap sources of some or all of the minerals so necessary in our diet.

In using the canned vegetables remember that in the canning process some of the mineral salts are dissolved out of the food into the water added to the vegetables—and some of the vegetable flavor as well. So do not pour this water down the sink, either simmer the vegetables under boiling point until the water has been absorbed, or drain it off and use it in soups or in the sauce to serve with the vegetables. Add the seasonings and butter to canned vegetables just before serving.

Baked Bean Casserole

3 small onions.
3 seeded green peppers.
4 tbsps. butter.
2 No. 2 cans pork and beans.
¾ cup grated American cheese.
½ cup fine, fresh bread crumbs
6 bacon slices.

Cook the onions and green peppers, chopped fine, in 2 tbsps. of the fat until they are tender and gold-brown in color. Then add the beans and combine thoroughly. Arrange in alternate layers with the cheese in a greased casseroles, having beans on top. Top with the crumbs mixed with 2 tbsps. of the fat. Arrange the bacon over the top and bake in a moderate oven of 375 deg. F. for 30 minutes. Serves six.

Lima Bean Scallop

1½ cups dried lima beans
1 small onion sliced
½ tsp. salt
1 cup diced celery
2 tbsps. chopped green pepper
1 cup condensed tomato soup
½ cup water
2 tbsps. melted butter
⅛ tsp. pepper
¼ cup buttered crumbs

Soak the beans in cold water for 6 to 8 hours. Drain and cover with boiling water. Add the sliced onion and cook slowly until tender. Drain, add salt, celery, green pepper, tomato soup, water, melted fat, pepper and salt to taste. Pour into a greased casserole, sprinkle the top with the crumbs and bake in a hot oven of 400 F. for [illegible] minutes. Bacon strips may be placed on top of the casserole during the baking if it is to be served as a main dish. Serves 6.

Pasteurized Milk for Malta Fever

By DR. R. S. COPELAND

SEVERAL of my readers have written for information about Malta fever. Others have asked about undulant fever. These are merely two names given to one and the same disease.

Dr. Copeland

This disease is one which affects goats and other animals, but it is transmitted to man either by direct contact with infected animals or by drinking of contaminated milk.

At one time this ailment was believed to be confined to the territory along the Mediterranean coast. For this reason it is often referred to as "Mediterranean fever." Likewise, it is found along the Rio Grande river and in the midwestern section of the United States.

Malta fever is often vague and confusing in its symptoms. It is sometimes mistaken for grippe. In certain cases it closely resembles typhoid fever.

At the beginning there is headache, accompanied by pains in the bones and joints. Then there come profuse sweating, constipation and an irregular fever. The temperature rises in the afternoon and the fever may persist for a week or 10 days.

Very likely there will be a period of good health and the patient feels entirely well. But in the chronic form there are relapses on and off for several months. Though the disease is not a serious one it may last for a long period, as I have said, and interfere with the general health and nutrition of the patient.

It is always a good plan to know that the milk you and your family drink comes from a reliable source. Make sure that the dairies that supply your milk are carefully inspected. Milk which is pure to begin with and quickly transported under proper refrigeration and sanitary precautions is a safe milk. This is your protection against undulant fever, tuberculosis, typhoid fever, and other infectious diseases.

Health Queries

J. S. Q.—Is there a way for reducing the nose?

A.—I would suggest that you consult a plastic surgeon; he will advise you.

THREE WOMEN :-: By Faith Baldwin

Fred Wonders if Elizabeth Will Rewed

Joyce, passing out of babyhood into childhood, was more startlingly like her father physically than she would be again until she reached maturity. She had his eyes, his hair, his very gestures, and the feminine counterpart of his clean beauty of body veiled, temporarily, in the round chubbiness of childhood. There the likeness ended. Never a dreamy child, she was eager, alert; never a shy child, she was curious, gregarious—"towardly" Nanna called the trait. Nanna, pensioned off and living with relatives, came often to see her nursling. The old woman was a little disappointed that Joyce was not like her father in temperament. "She don't care for learning, the way he did," said Nanna.

Nanna was wrong; learning appealed to Joyce. She wanted to know everything. She read early, but books would never be a passion with her—books were words caged between covers and there was a wide world beyond them to explore.

She made friends easily. Her early school years were full of adventures and encounters. She would bring children home from the streets, she would venture into forbidden neighborhoods and return gaily the accredited leader of what looked very like a gang of hoodlums. Her grandfather punished and expostulated in vain.

"But you have your own friends, Joyce!"

HER OWN FRIENDS

ot as nice as Norrie!"

Norrie was a small Irish child, with a wide urchin grin, a missing front tooth, flaming hair and a front of brass.

"But Norrie is not a nice little girl, my dear. She—— Surely," asked Mrs. Sheldon in despair, "surely you can see the difference?"

"You said we were all equal in God's sight, Grannie!"

Well what was one to do? Religion and theory on one hand and caste on the other. Mrs. Sheldon surveyed the child with resigned horror, with, perhaps, a stifled pride. Head up, banners flying she looked a little champion. From whence did she have these too democratic ideas—ideals? Not, surely, from the Lennox or Sheldon side, and not, Louisa admitted, from the Howlands. The Howlands had not possessed money but they had a keen sense of class distinction. This was a development not to be [illegible] at Elizabeth's door.

It was plain that Joyce enjoyed observing the large uncouth manner of Norrie's teeming household. The noise, the slatternly mother, the good-natured, shirt-sleeved father, the reek and dirt and laughter amused her. Yet she was intelligent enough to realize that what became Norrie so well, what lent her a certain fascination, was not for her. Her own manners did not suffer, she did not emulate Norrie in speech or bearing. She simply liked her and observed her and Norrie for some occult reason, found no cause to resent this.

CLEAR THOUGHTS

Joyce had always thought vaguely about her mother and her grandmother. Growing up, her thoughts became clear, clean-cut. Grandmother punished. Mother did not. Grandmother was the court of last resort. Mother had no standing in any court. Grandmother was austere, undemonstrative, unbending. Mother was gentle, affectionately inclined—when grandmother wasn't around—arms about you, a sudden caress, a kiss. But grandmother was always the same, solid, invincible, a person who listened to you, encouraged you, reprimanded—in short, a person you could depend upon. Mother was never in the foreground exactly. She was remote, she was withdrawn. She was, it seemed, frightened.

Frightened of what?

Other girls' mothers were different, Joyce decided at last and decided it resentfully. As she grew, so grew the resentment.

Another thing. Mother didn't talk about father to Joyce, but grandmother did. Joyce had his picture, a young face looking out at her from a strip of cardboard. Gradually he became a hero to her. She and grandmother never tired of talking of him.

"He was your little boy—like I'm your little girl?"

"As not like, Joyce. Yes, my little boy."

HEART-BROKEN

Oh, Louisa, how your heart broke twenty times a day. The child's hands, folded about the picture, the child's clear, unimpassioned voice, putting the childish questions. And how good that heartbreak was!

Lennox—you understand. I've forgiven you? You've left me this, Lennox—this darling revenge.

It had been easy—almost laughably so. She had never once tried to assert her claim, the blonde, quiet girl moving about the dark house. It was as though she had no part in the child, tacitly admitted it, was reconciled. Yet she was not reconciled. Louisa knew that shrewdly. Sooner or later it must come to a clash between them, and the elder woman was content knowing she held the conquering weapons.

Clash or not the first seven years were of utmost importance and those years Louisa, undisputed, ruled.

Their mutual routine was very placid. Winters in town, broken before Joyce went to school by trips to the South. Summers, now, in the ugly, ornate house Mrs. Sheldon bought in Connecticut—a house with the lines of a bandbox, a great porte-cochere, mansard roofs and mid-Victorian furniture. But the Sound was not far away, there were lawns and trees and lovely gardens and it was not greatly distant from the place where the Gastons, the Harrimans and the Van Alstynes summered.

SHE AGED LITTLE

"I saw Louisa Sheldon yesterday—she ages very little," people, at tea on some one's veranda, would comment.

"The child is a handful. She challenged my Tony to a bicycle race last week and a tree-climbing test the week before. She beat him on the tree business, and would have won the race, he reported, only she fell off. What? Oh, not at all—picked herself up, pushed that mane of hair out of her eyes and laughed."

"Naomi and Ruth—"

"Such devotion—"

"Marry? Oh, I doubt it. She's had opportunities, I have heard. Men like that type, you know—and she's young, but she'll never leave Louisa."

"I wonder—"

Some one else wondered, had been wondering for some time. Fred Van Alstyne. He wondered, distressfully, would Elizabeth remarry?

When had he first fallen in love with his friend's widow? He could not have said—he had never forgotten that glimpse of her, leaning from the carriage that brought her home from the church. It had pierced his heart, an authentic pang of beauty. But it hadn't happened then, he thought. Perhaps, after she came back from England with the child. He had called at the house, had seen her drifting silently about the great rooms, a pale girl in a black frock. She did not wear black now and her clear pallor was sometimes faintly stained with pink. But he always saw her in his heart as that [illegible] complaining figure.

LOVED WIDOW

He'd loved Lennox Sheldon—now he loved Lennox Sheldon's young widow. He thought Lennox would be a little glad, if he knew.

And Elizabeth?

He did not see her alone often. Almost always the old woman was there, the witch, he termed her. He had never liked her. He was a young man with a rather ponderous but sound turn of mind. He hadn't needed much imagination to see what she'd done to Lennox.

He might have pointed out to Elizabeth that she was free to come and go as she pleased—a married woman with a child, no girl to be chaperoned and guarded and followed up. Yet somehow he did not suggest this.

He had no belief in the Ruth and Naomi legend. He knew, he thought he knew, that Elizabeth was afraid of her mother-in-law. He thought he could explain that—her youth when she had come to the Sheldon household, her years of being dominated, her tragedy, her financial dependence. He wanted to take her in his arms and say: "You need never be afraid any more."

He wanted, dreadfully, to teach her the ways of laughter. It seemed to him that she never laughed, not really. He wanted to awaken her to life. She was a statue, walking.

They had always been good friends in a quiet sort of way.

Smart Trimmings Are Half Concealed

By CABLE FROM PARIS BUREAU

PARIS, Dec. 7—Wear your white trimming inside, not outside your dark dresses, and let it show through the fabric or appear at open edges—these are the newest instructions that Paris gives out to well-dressed women. The white collar is all the smarter for being half concealed, the white cuff is of more fashion value when it is inside the sleeve than out, and the white belt is of more style importance than either collar or cuff.

There are many ways to get this inside trimming effect. Drawnwork, or fabric woven in the drawn-work manner, is one method; white gumpes worn under dresses of this type give the desired smartness and boleros lined with white may be cut longer at the back to show the lighter color.

The Lelong dress in today's illustration makes use of the drawnwork weave to give a generous spread of half-concealed white about the throat and shoulders. The white gumpe appears below the bolero, turns a white collar over the neckline of the dress and gleams through the slashes in the yoke. A white stitched belt accentuates the inward curve at the waistline.

This frock, along with its finger-tip length jacket, are of brown woolen. Brown astrakhan edges the hem of the jacket and forms a little upstanding collar fastened tight about the base of the throat.

Adjustable Wings on Lake's New Plane

Washington, Dec. 7 (AP)—While his father has been devising improvements for undersea craft, Thomas E. Lake of Milford, Ct., has invented a flying machine which he believes may be revolutionary.

The son of Simon Lake, pioneer submarine inventor, was granted a patent on an airplane with three groups of adjustable wings which provide variable lift and stability. The set of wings and the propeller are arranged to provide three-point support and means for propulsion.

erything was ready, she saw in one efficient glance.

As she came into the hall she almost bumped into a large powerful man running through the door.

Jill knew him by sight. "Cy" O'Shea from headquarters and behind him his partner, McNabb.

"Where's Slater?" O'Shea asked hurriedly.

Jill nodded toward the door. O'Shea went on a run.

"There's been a shooting," Jill heard him call.

Commotion at the side doors of the Admitting Room. Two officers on duty at the hospital went outside. There was sound of scuffling feet as the men came up the steps with the stretcher.

Jill was all action in Operating Room A. Slater came in and gave a nod of approval at the red-haired nurse.

They were wheeling in the inanimate figure in torn, blood-soaked clothes. O'Shea and McNabb followed close.

"You've got to bring him to for a minute, Doc," Jill heard O'Shea's voice. The man had been shot. Jill worked swiftly, mechanically. Suddenly her capable hands faltered as she looked at the ghastly face of the man lying there under the high glaring light of the operating room. She paused for only one terrible second.

"Is he dead?" O'Shea's voice was strained.

Slater shook his head.

O'Shea's eyes turned to the man's waxen face. Above it suddenly he saw a pair of slim hands, capable hands. They were rigid. They trembled. In surprise O'Shea looked at the nurse standing beside him. [illegible] her eyes were almost black. They looked glazed and sightless. Odd that Mordant should get nervous. She wasn't a new girl!

Jill cut away the stained clothing from the dying man's chest.

Clink, clink! Something fell to the floor. Jill went on with her work as O'Shea bent down on his [illegible] and in the palm of his hands were two bullets.

"They certainly gave it to this boy!" he said in a low voice. "Don't let him die on us, doc, for God's sake!"

"Please God, let him die! Let him die, now!"

Daily True Story

Designing Matrimony

WHEN BRENDA MARKHAM and John Furnon were united in what is commonly mis-expressed as the "bonds" of matrimony, the general consensus was that the marriage would take.

The reasons were almost too obvious. The two had been working together for nearly five years in the same draughting office. Brenda had been something of a novelty when she first joined the male aggregation of engineers. But her ability, [illegible] and efficiency soon won her the respect of her co-workers so that they treated her as if she were a man.

Then, of course they possessed a similarity of tastes. They reacted similarly to the theater, the motion picture and the concert field. They seemed to think alike and feel alike and even their dietary tastes were reported to be synonymous. At least the office spy had reported seeing them share griddle cakes on any number of occasions.

The Markham-Furnons (she was a Lucy Stoner and he believed that a women is entitled to a career and her individuality) set up house in a fashionable section. It was a small, two-room apartment but they needed no more. She continued her work in the office.

NO CHILDREN

But even a two-room house needs care and attention and Brenda revealed no interest or aptitude for housework.

So they engaged a young girl (who had come highly recommended) to care for their home.

The year passed and a second and a third. Regularly every morning (except Sundays) John and Brenda would rise, have breakfast served them at the identical time, take the same subway and step into their office together. Evenings they spent either at the theater or concert hall or visiting old friends and occasionally in their own apartment reading.

Their friends and office acquaintances began to make sly remarks about the necessity of the race to survive, about increasing the world's population and about the breeding of lesser forms of human existence. But the more obvious the hint the more Brenda smiled and John would smile with her.

When a man loves a woman his moods will sway with her moods. Brenda and John did have the same intellectual ideas and the same artistic tastes. But their fundamental primordial instincts were different.

FAILS TO REACT

Under the sly prodding of his friends and office companions John gradually began to realize that in marriage he had hoped for more than mere community of cold ideas. With the glamor of their love beginning to wear in four years of companionship, John began to long for other intangibles to hold them together. In other words—he began to yearn for a child.

But Brenda failed to react. She saw with her clear intellectual reasoning what a child would mean to her. Aside from the physical pain involved in the task, she foresaw the ruin of her career—the end of her ambitions.

The separation left a void in the life of each. But John found solace in seeking the companionship of other women less intelligent but more emotional than Brenda. On the other, Brenda had lost the quality of attracting the male of species. Her intellectual pursuits had stripped her of those charms and guiles that act as a magnet for the opposing sex. Her manner unconsciously repelled the flirtatious and gay-minded.

BRENDA CONSENTS

Although each had specialized in a different field and each worked in different offices, they were still employed by the same company and worked in the same building. It was inevitable that they should meet. When they did meet—they exchanged casual greetings.

After several such months, an occasion arose when Brenda was obliged to consult John about one of her designs. She went into his office and unexpectedly found [illegible]. She was confused for a moment, then braced herself. They went over her problem quietly. When they were through John suddenly squarely at Brenda.

"Are you happy?" he asked.

"Are you?" she parried.

"No," he replied. "You know my longing for a child. Well, I could probably marry anyone of the girls I had gone out with recently. But I want my children to be intelligent—and you know my belief in—eugenics."

"John," she replied, "I suppose I don't have to tell you I have been very lonesome since our separation. I have about come around to the conclusion—that the older things in life are more important to happiness than most of our new fangled ideas."

"Then," gasped John, "you would be . . . willing . . ."

Brenda laid an arm on his shoulder. "Yes . . . but, of course, I will not give up my career . . ."

Lipstick, powder, toys and booze,
Dainty pairs of high-heeled shoes,
Stockings, panties, girdles, slips,
Pearls and rings and diamond clips,
Coats and pants and vests to match,
Brightly colored ties to catch
The eyes of doting, nifty dames,
Backgammon, and other games,
Highboys, armchairs, birds and plates,
Glassware, pottery and skates,
Dresses, razor blades and soap,
Typewriters and hempen rope,
Antiques, fancy desks and books,
Needles, safety pins and hooks,
Cigarettes and pots and pans,

Boy Who Made Good!

You may risk triteness for accuracy in describing Rex Smith as a gentleman and scholar, for he's both. Erudite and cultured, honor graduate of the University of Virginia, a poet and a versatile writer is Rex and it is only incidental that he is a close friend of George Jean Nathan and the husband of the actress, Alice Buchanan. The thing is, Rex always had a secret yearning to be a dramatic or art critic but instead became a foreign correspondent. Right now he is the Associated Press correspondent in Madrid. The point of it is, after these many years, his ambition is to be realized. The A. P. has just appointed him a full-fledged critic of bull fights in Spain—the first American to hold the position. Books---And a Number of Things

By CHARLES HANSON TOWNE

If you are so unfortunate as not to appreciate and care for the particular Grade A form of humor which is supplied by Robert Benchley, no one will be able to convince you of its worth. Your love of it must be spontaneous, like the humor itself. There is no way of course of explaining it. You just delight in it, or, unhappily, you don't.

I happen to have a good time with all that Mr. Benchley writes. His sparkling dramatic criticisms in the New Yorker please me every week; and when he touches upon other subjects I find his trenchant pen always fulfilling my expectations. When he speaks in public, or from the stage in some revue, as he did every night a few years ago, I rock with ready mirth. There never was a funnier stunt than his "Treasurer's Report."

He has a new book of skits and sketches out for the holidays with the delicious title of "No Poems, or Around the World Backward and Sideways" (Harper & Bros.). It is chock full of wise nonsense and hilarious buffoonery, one of those rare books studded with so many bright passages that, when you have read them and roared at them you long to rush to some understanding friend and share what has just given you such a joyous feeling.

Whether Benchley is confessing to you as the imagined novelist, how he creates his work, or whether he is burlesquing the average English mystery story or wondering why three-year-old youngsters are allowed no more privacy than the celebrated goldfish of Irvin Cobb, you fall beneath his spell. He has a way with him, this carefree fellow. If he takes you on a trip with him to Spirit Land, or bids you listen to his diatribe on noise abatement, you have a fine time in his company.

When he wants to know what is to be done with people who can't read a Sunday paper without messing it all up, you wonder why you never expressed the same thought, when for so long you have noticed the strewn fragments on the floor of a Sabbath morning. He sees everything, and all around it, and through it. He is almost uncanny in his bright understanding of the weaknesses of his fellow beings. Read what a clerk at a travel-bureau desk has to endure in the way of stupid questions.

"We want to know," begins the mother, not quite sure whether or not the clerk speaks English, "if we can get a good train from here to Interlaken."

"Not Interlaken, mother!" says one of the daughters in evident disgust at her mother's gaucherie. "Lauterbrunnen."

"Your uncle said 'Interlaken,'" insists the mother. "Didn't he, Miriam?"

"My daughters just graduated in June from Miss Teasdale's school," explains the mother to the clerk. "We thought it would be very nice for them to see as much of Europe as they can while they are young. Their Uncle Harcourt, who wrote this letter, is in the London branch of the U. S. Steel & Wire Co., their father's brother."

"Very nice, I'm sure, Madame," responds the clerk politely. At this point he is accosted by another, and larger lady, who has pushed her way up from the left.

Then look at the skit on the noon telephone operator and recognize yourself as the person desirous of getting a number at that zero hour. And see yourself, too, in the chapter on the fear of thunderstorms.

Indeed you and I and all the rest of poor frail humanity are in every one of these gay sketches. And there's no use denying it. Benchley has found us all out. But the best of it is that he has found himself out, too.

With the election long since over, and everyone wondering what will be done with the Eighteenth Amendment, it would be a good thing for every American citizen to look into William Kay Wallace's volume, "Our Obsolete Constitution" (John Day).

The document itself is given in its entirety. The individual, Mr. Wallace holds, has been stripped of his defenses against the encroachment of government and constitutional immunities are no longer valid. Moreover, our government has in principle become autocratic. The Constitution, in a word, is obsolete.

He thinks that every student of history will at once recognize in these facts the ingredients of a revolution, since revolution in the affairs of men occur as the result of an unstable distribution of power. When the governing are no longer able to command the acquiescence of the governed, a revolution is inevitable.

There is much common sense in this book. It has been written with an alert eye on our present economic and political difficulties and Mr. Wallace thinks that the time has come for our national document to undergo a complete [illegible] through a constitutional convention organized for this sole purpose. There are many others who think as he does.

New York, Dec. 7. Rarely in the past ha[illegible] been less nervous over the assembling of Congress. H[illegible] rather than harmful legislation is expected. In the highest financial circles less importance is attached to prohibition legislation than is attached by many politicians and most of the public. Rational tax action is looked for, including adoption of a sales tax. At the moment, little or no dread of inflationary legislation is expressed.

Income tax collections next year are likely to prove extremely disappointing. The nation assuredly needs all the income it will be able to collect from a rational sales tax and from a beer tax as soon as the latter can become operative.

You may shortly be able to buy very low-priced automobiles in leading department stores and also from mail order concerns. Only, no "trade-in" will be considered. Payment by instalment will be possible.

STATE ST.
Hears

That those who had the courage to buy stocks at the three levels indicated here are in a fair way to reap some very nice profits. It required a good bit of nerve and no little patience, but the gains of a few days wiped out the losses established since November 21. Unless all the signs fail a real upswing is under way and it will not pay to sell stocks in the belief they may be replaced on minor trading setbacks. The immediate future presents one or two obstacles in technical resistance, which must be overcome before it may be fairly said the track is all clear

Technical Gossip

Technical resistance w[illegible] approximately [illegible] and at the minor downtrend [illegible] extending [illegible] formed since September [illegible] the two [illegible] more difficult to handle.

The [illegible] on the [illegible] Its importance [illegible] upswing will be determined by the manner in which the [illegible] lines on the [illegible] If final prices are above the opening, it is considered as bullish. A lower closing questions the general position.

T[illegible] the September 7 top through that of November 12 lies at 65¼ on the 30 industrials and on the rails at 28. These figures are for today. They work progressively lower naturally, and must be computed every session. They will be noted here as necessary.

This and That

The major trend lines spoken of above are the real obstacle to the advance and it will not pay to be bullish and underestimate their resistance. In order to be convincing, the market should march decisively through them on volume. And the writer will feel better if final prices are above the[illegible].

The one thing that makes the bulls so confident is the trader's disposition of bears to fight the rise. The latter have seen so many false starts ahead, in the last two months, that they feel secure in throwing out additional shorts on the rise. This cannot help but maintain technical strength.

Of the stocks recommended here, Air Reduction and Atchison act the best. Both look as though all the speculative offerings had been cleaned up. Air Reduction is but a short hitch from its year's high and, once through there, could put on quite a show.

BOOT AND SHOE PRODUCTION IS RUNNING HIGH

By FRANK H. MELOON

It will surprise many to learn that the latest country-wide study of boot and shoe production made by the U. S. Department of Commerce shows the output for the current year running at a considerable [illegible]

[illegible]ber. The latest figures show Massachusetts, which sent Wilson, the "Natick Cobbler," to the Vice-President's chair in heyday of its early shoemaking fame, was running consistently ahead of New York, its nearest rival, in production, although a year ago New York held leadership for awhile.

Gerard Swope, who began his career at a dollar a day with General Electric after being graduated from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, is believed in State Street circles to be the most likely successor to Owen D. Young if the latter retires as expected from the chairmanship of G. E. Mr. Swope is now president. The Street looks for an elevation from the ranks to fill Swope's [illegible]. That has been the G. E. tradition to [illegible] and two chairmen—Young and Charles A. Coffin, the [illegible] General Electric and its predecessor company, the Thomson-Houston Co. The post of chairman was created in 1913 for Mr. Coffin, who up to that time had been president.

Gerard Swope

Nine years later Mr. Coffin resigned as chairman, and Owen D. Young was elected his successor. At the same time Swope was made president, succeeding E. W. Rice Jr., Mr. Coffin's right-hand man for 40 years. Mr. Coffin picked Young as his successor. Coffin had hired Young as general counsel back in 1913, when Coffin already was beginning to think of retiring. The corporation's general counsel had just been killed in an auto accident, and Young, a rising Boston attorney, who had been besting G. E. in several court cases, got the place.

Economic Laws Must Be Heeded

By LEWIS HANEY

([illegible] New York University)

New York, Dec. 7—One of my readers takes me to task for criticizing various schemes suggested for the relief of business.

My reply is that the worst enemies of business recovery today [illegible] such schemes.

Our greatest danger lies in trying to do the impossible and wrecking business by not observing economic law.

For example, there is the problem of farm debt. The debts are there. Many of the farmers are insolvent and cannot pay. Only one thing remains to be done and [illegible] where necessary, write off the bad debts and refinance the sound ones on better terms and then begin anew firmly resolving never again to extend unsound credits or to engage in price fixing.

But, after all our sad experience with farm credits and price "stabilization," it seems that we are about to have another attempt. This is variously called the Harriman plan or the "voluntary domestic allotment law."

I hesitate to discuss it because its final form has not yet been announced. But it is clear enough that the general scheme [illegible] raise the price of certain farm products artificially in the domestic [illegible] of millions of dollars to farmers.

It is another attempt to force prices up to the levels not warranted [illegible] involves another attempt to force one part of the nation to pay large subsidies to another part.

The idea seems to be to raise certain farm prices to pre-war levels. This scheme pays no attention to various substitute products or to foreign prices, or to costs of production. You can't boost cotton without encouraging the substitution of rayon, silk and jute.

You can't boost wheat without increasing the consumption of other foods in its place.

And our cotton and wheat production is geared to meet a considerable export demand. Every time we shove cotton and wheat prices up in comparison with world markets we stimulate the use of foreign growths and larger foreign production.

TODAY'S NEWS OF WALL ST. LEADERS

IMPORTANT shares generally behaved very well through most of today's session in Wall Street, and some converts to the bull side for the near-term prospect were added. Bullishness in the carrier group was reported largely based on the better car loadings reports just is[illegible]

Pennsy's Loadings Exceed Last Week's

Total loaded cars handled by Pennsylvania R. R. system the week ended Dec. 3 were 80,489 cars, of which 51,080 represented cars loaded on company's lines and 29,409 received from connections. Total compares with 74,915 the preceding week and 96,753 in like 1931 week. Decrease from 1931 week was 16.8 per cent against a drop of 17.9 per [illegible] previous year.

N. Y. Central's Loadings Better

New York Central responded moderately to a good increase in car loadings. For the week ended Dec. 3 Central loaded on own lines 36,964 cars, against 43,[illegible] in like week of 1931. It received from connections 47,838 cars against 55,842. Total cars handled were 84,802 [illegible] the same week last year.

For the week ended Nov. 26 it [illegible] 36,977 the like week of 1931 and received from connections 46,141 [illegible]

G. C. Murphy Sales Ahead of a Year Ago

G. C. Murphy Company's November sales totaled $1,562,627, against $1,559,216 in November, 1931, an increase of two-tenths of a per cent, the company reported. Sales in October showed a decrease of 5½ per cent from the same month of 1931. For the first 11 months of the year, sales totaled $15,642,348, against $16,220,229, for the like period of last year, a decrease of 3.5 per cent.

Dividend News Slightly Better

Pessimism that has kept the financial community in a depressed state so long has apparently obscured a rather favorable shift in the trend of dividends. A compilation showed that during November more cheerful items appeared than in October. The[illegible] totaled 48, including eight increases, eight resumptions, 27 extras and [illegible]. In October there were 35 and in November a year ago [illegible]. At the same time [illegible] last month were the smallest since [illegible] per cent [illegible] in the similar month of 1931.

—SPECTATOR—Says:

The revelation in President Hoover's message that the Government was actually getting down to business about balancing the budget and cutting down expenses was the new stimulus everyone had been waiting for. Behind it all, though, was the important fact that the market had been sold to a standstill and that stocks didn't break wide open despite the depressing uncertainties of the last few weeks.

Caution Advised

The market apparently has started an intermediate rally that could carry quite a bit further, perhaps to last month's highs. Don't abandon your caution at this time though, for there are still hurdles ahead.

Some of the recent selling in Safeway Stores is said to have come from an investment trust identified with a prominent brokerage house.

Chart Views

The important thing from a chart point of view was that the rails held above the Oct. 10 lows when the industrials went through. This has brought a curious transformation in speculative sentiment on the rails . . . It was aided by the [illegible] P[illegible] switch from N. Y. Central to Pennsylvania, the street figuring that if U. P. thought well enough of a railroad to buy 100,000 shares then maybe they weren't going to the dogs.

We hear there will be a hot time at the coming meeting of one of the Big Four film companies, involved recently in a proxy battle for control.

We should not be surprised if there were a large and weak short interest in farm stocks, considering the recent weakness in wheat.

$2,000,000 Eastman Expansion Program

Another large expansion program is under way at the Tennessee Eastman Corp., Kingsport, Tenn. plant, which is estimated to cost about $2,000,000.

BOSTON STOCKS ARE MOVED HIGHER

M[illegible] higher prices [illegible] today's late dealings on the Boston Stock Exchange [illegible] ranged from fractions to about 1 point. Trading slipped [illegible] with the [illegible] Edison [illegible] stocks, and showed [illegible] of almost 2 points.

New England Telephone [illegible] 2 points. General Electric [illegible] major fraction above [illegible] close. Boston Elevated moved ahead a full point. American Telephone recovered an early fractional loss and entered the final period showing slight improvement.

Rail shares displayed strength with Atchison moving more than a point. Pennsylvania was about a point above [illegible] price. New Haven [illegible]

Waltham Watch [illegible] strong, with both [illegible] prior preferred showing points [illegible]. United Fruit was more than a point higher. United Gas Co., Gillette and First National Stores were slightly higher levels.

POWER OUTPUT SHOWS GAIN

New York, Dec. 7 (AP)—The National Electric Light Association reported today that power in the United States increased [illegible] but the rise was considerably smaller than occurred in the corresponding period of the preceding [illegible] years.

Output totaled 1,516,[illegible] kilowatt hours against 1,47[illegible] the week ended November 26, an improvement of 35,069,000 compared with increases of roughly 71,000,000 kilowatt hours in 1931, 75,000,000 in 1930 and 88,000,000 in 1929. The percentage decrease from 1931 was 9.6 against a decline of 7.8 per cent in the previous week.

The Atlantic seaboard showed production as 7.7 per cent under 1931 against a recession of 5.6 per cent the week before. New England alone, 7.3 per cent against 3.7; central industrial region, 12.3 per cent against 10.2 per cent, and Pacific coast states 7.8 per cent unchanged.

LEADERS RISE IN THE FACE OF PROFIT-TAKING

New York, Dec. 7—The stock market leaders today staged their third successive advance in the face of heavy profit-taking induced by yesterday's sharp uprush.

After an irregular opening, the bulls rallied behind the auto shares to send the list forward. Leadership later rotated to the rails and then to the oilqs.

UNDERTONE IS GOOD

Through most of the session the market displayed a good undertone. Gains of a point or 2 were well scattered through the list in the afternoon. Reduction in the American Water Works dividend from $2 to $1 brought a break of 2 points in the stock and brought a temporarfy check to the advance. Gold stocks, which had been widely touted in recent sessions, also were weak.

Bonds were strong and commodities improved under the leadership of wheat and corn.

Bulls, encouraged by the successful short squeeze late in the previous session, were more enterprising in today's stock market than they had been in some time. Some of the more popular trading favorites were churned about in fair-sized blocks.

On the whole, however, it was uphill work. Oils, mail order shares, some of the rails, and miscellaneous industrials were firm spots.

Issues up 1 to around 2 points at the best included Standard of N. J., Texas Corp., U. S. Steel, Allied Chemical, Case, Air Reduction, and United Aircraft, while advances of major fractions to a point appeared in Montgomery Ward, Pennsylvania, New York Central, Southern Pacific, and others. American Telephone and Union Pacific, strong spots yesterday, made litle further progress.

Strength of the oils evidently reflected reports that the Texas commission was considering another sharp reduction in allowable crude output in that state. Oil circles expressed the hope that such action would bring the recalcitrant companies into line with the recent increase in mid-continent crude prices.

SELLING OF GOLD ISSUES

The petroleum statistics for last week were none too favorable, showing a gain of 610,000 barrels in gasoline stocks, and a daily average increase in crude output of 28,300 barrels.

Selling of the Gold mining issues evidently reflected the better tone of sterling exchange and of commodity prices. Montgomery Ward has attracted bullish attention on the basis of its sales volume in the past several weeks, which is understood to have been sufficient to take operations into black figures and cut into the losses of the first nine months of the year.

The rails seemed to respond to indications of a fair pickup in freight volume, after the sharp loss of the Thanksgiving Day week. Pennsylvania reported that cars handled in the next week, ended December 3, totaled 80,489, against 74,915 in the previous week. New York Central reported a similar gain.

The latest theory advanced for the reported shifting by Union Pacific of an investment of 100,000 shares of New York Central into shares of Pennsylvania is that it was done to establish a loss for tax purposes.

Plymouth Cordage Operated at Loss

Century-old Plymouth Cordage Co. reports for year ended Sept. 30, net loss after depreciation, inventory mark-down, etc., of $232,627. This compares with a 1931 net profit of $24,857, or .3 per cent on combined $8,000,000 capital stock of $100 par value and $108,280 employees' special stock of $10 par, and with a 1930 net profit of $287,508, or 3.55 per cent on combined stock, after an inventory shrinkage of $2,134,667, partly met by use of an inventory reserve of $949,161 established in the 1929 fiscal year.

Transamerica in Larger Earnings

San Francisco, Dec. 7—Although it is too early to estimate accurately the net asset value per share which Transamerica Corp. may be expected to show as of Dec. 31, because of market changes which may arise in the interim, deductions from known facts concerning the rate of income on controlled subsidiaries and on securities held for investment account indicate the corporation will exceed last year's net profit showing by a margin of 150 per cent to 200 per cent. It is probable that Transamerica will report for 1932 consolidated net after charges of more than $5,000,000, possibly more nearly $6,000,000.

Copper Is Lowered to 5 Cts. a Pound

New York, Dec. 7 (AP)—The price of copper slipped another fraction to approximate its record low today with sales reported by first hands at 5 cents a pound. Dealers said that, while first quarter 1933 shipments are being held at 5¼ cents, it is not improbable that moderate tonnages can be obtained at 5⅛ cents.

Crude Oil Output Up 20,503 Barrels

Daily average production of crude oil in the United States in the week ended December 3 totaled 2,122,775 barrels, an increase of 20,503 barrels over the preceding week, Oil and Gas Journal reported.

$1,000,000 IN GOLD ARRIVES

New York, Dec. 7 (AP)—Incoming tide of gold metal to American shores today brought a shipment of approximately $1,000,000 from France.

This is the largest shipment of yellow metal from France since May of 1931. During the past year, France has taken a large volume fo gold from this country, but, with recent weakness of the French franc against the American dollar, foreign exchange quarters are now inclined to predict a return flow of substantial proportions.

The franc has recently sagged to the lowest level since it was stabilized" in 1928. Exchange dealers pointed out that a substantial movement of metal would have started sooner, but for the fact that the costs of shipping the metal have recently been incrased.

The French gold was brought on the S. S. Paris, packed in 33 boxes, each containing four bars worth about $8000.

Same steamer also brought 155 boxes, or approximately $5,000,000, in gold from England. The S. S. President Polk brought $525,000 in gold from India, consigned to the National City Bank, and the S. S. Scythic $250,000 from England, consigned to the French-American Banking Corp. Some of the movement of metal from England was understood to have been for the account of continental European central banks, possibly the Bank of France.

JEWELRY SALES OVER SEASONAL

New York, Dec. 7—Fall sales of jewelry exceeded the normal seasonal increase by a wide margin but sales for the first nine months of the year contracted 21 per cent as compared with the same period of 1931, while price levels fell 16 per cent.

These facts, compiled from operations of representative jewelry stores and published by Arthur Fertig & Co., show that jewelry sales have been maintained at a level comparable with other retail merchandising.

A substantial part of the sustained operation is attributable to the policy of adding kindred lines which broadened the market and increased the number of customers. Study of departmental sales shows that without these additional lines, sales would have decreased 14.7 per cent instead of 21 per cent.

Emotion in Finance Heightens Troubles

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUCKEYSER

Before the panic, there were excesses on the spending side. Now the pendulum has swung to a retrenchment craze.

It seems to me that there should at this juncture be resistance to further blind and indiscriminate cutting down, and that an intelligent effort henceforth should be made to balance income and outgo through emphasis on enlarging gross volume of business.

Referring to pleas for immediate balancing of the budget, without due regard to the need for unemployment relief and other social services, Virgil Jordan, McGraw Hill economist, speaking before the New York University conference on the relation of law and business, said:

"We must go through with the grim, sardonic and delusive pursuit of higher private standards of life through lower public standards of living; we must save money on public employes and spend it on public construction in order that investors may be encouraged to throw it away in excessive private competitive construction projects; we must avoid taxing public utilities and instead curtail their income by cutting down the municipal consumption of electric power and darkening our streets; we must encourage the steel companies by curtailing public expenditures and reducing taxes while we patriotically pay more for domestic than for foreign steel for public construction.

"We must go on giving heed to the admonitions of bankers and railroad presidents, who demand drastic reductions in public outlays, so that we may go on loaning public money to prevent bank failures and pay railroad deficits.

". . . Ultimately I hope there will be a return of reason and sanity which will show us once more the real significance of public spending for the stability of our economic system, and teach us the true meaning of economy and efficiency in public business at least as well as we have learned it in private business, where we now know that wise spending is the secret of steady prosperity."

Expansion Started by Loft

New York, Dec. 7—Loft, Inc., big candy chain, has started an expansion program that will add 25 stores to its group in various sections of the country.

Heavy Steel Scrap Lower

New York, Dec. 7 (AP)—"Iron Age" reports lower heavy melting steel scrap prices at Pittsburgh, Chicago and in eastern Pennsylvania. The publication's composite is down to $9.92 a ton, the lowest since February and within 50 cents of the year's low. Finished steel is unchanged at 1.948 cents a pound, but a decline in eastern Pennsylvania foundry pig iron, largely a result of foreign competition, has reduced the composite for the commodity to $13.56.

Canadian Beef Sale Increases

Ottawa, Dec. 7—Sale of graded beef, which was introduced in Canada by the Canadian government department of agriculture in 1930, continues to increase. In 1931 total sales of this graded beef, indicated by red and blue bands marked indelibly on the outside of the cuts, the red for first and the blue for second grade, was 17,240,748 pounds. For the first ten months of 1932 sales were 17,795,388 pounds.

PRODUCTION OF STEEL IS OFF

New York, Dec. 7 (AP)—Steel ingot production this week is off 1 percentage point to 16 per cent of the country's capacity, Iron Age said today. Shrinkage in new business and shipping orders in the last few weeks indicates further curtailment this month, particularly in the final fortnight.

"In states, such as Ohio," said the Review, "where there is a tax on inventories at the end of the year, some plants will operate little or no steel-making capacity in the month, but as an offset other companies will try to find extra work, so that they may fatten the Christmas pay envelopes of employes. Such efforts may tend to prevent a sharp drop in steel mill activity."

ELECTRIC WORK ON 7-DAY BASIS

Chicago, Dec. 7—As a result of increased demand for this new automatic toaster product introduced early in September, this division of the McGraw Electric Co. has stepped up its operations from a six day to a seven-day-a-week basis, Max McGraw, president, announced today. Four hundred additional employes were hired by the company at the time production of the improved "Flexible Clock" Toastmaster was begun. The company originally began production on a five-day week basis, then increased to six days and now will operate Sundays as well.

Mr. McGraw stated that the company has just shipped one carload of "Toastmasters" to New York to cover back orders. He added that the company is particularly optimistic about the future of this new product because of the fact that demand for it has increased uniformly all over the country rather than in particular sections, indicating, he believes, that it has a strong country-wide appeal.

S. S. Kresge Sales Off 12.3 Per Cent

New York, Dec. 7—S. S. Kresge Co. sales for November were $9,841,870, compared with $11,220,298 for November, 1931, a decrease of 12.3 per cent. Sales in October had shown a decrease of 15.9 per cent from October, 1931.

For 11 months sales totaled $106,370,162, compared with $123,612,071 for the corresponding period of 1931, a decrease of 13.9 per cent. On Nov. 30 the company had 681 American stores and 42 Canadian stores in operation, a total of 723 stores.

Q. and A. DEPARTMENT

Q.—

I often ride the same street car you take going home, and I notice you always slip off your shoes. Why is that?

Curious.

Ans.—

Curious, indeed! Well, Sir or Mrs., as the case may be, it happens that Aunti B. has arch trouble, and if everybody would take off their shoes after boarding a street car it wouldn't be so bad for those who get their feet stepped on. I am setting an example which I hope will sweep the street car riding public like a prairie flower, or, that is, prairie fire I mean to say.

What Shall We Do With 1000 New Inventions?

By GILBERT SELDES

American inventors are taking out patents at the rate of a thousand a week, heaven help us. Some of them, no doubt, are improvements on machinery for making machinery for making dynamos, and we need not worry about them; but I suppose a hundred new pencil sharpeners and razors and shoelaces and thermometers and cigar lighters are passed each week by the Patent Office, and as soon as money is found a hundred new factories will be established and we will have to learn how to use all these new gadgets and throw away our old ones—and get prosperous again. Births, deaths, marriages and divorces have all slumped a little during the depression; even suicides have not continued to rise, for we got used to things after 1931. But the mind of man is inexhaustibly fertile and new inventions are flooding in; dammed at the moment by lack of available funds, they will flow over and drown us the moment the prospects for sales are good.

Gilbert Seldes

The most important inventions are those which are coming out of research laboratories supported by great industries and corporations. They are in the newest business in the world—the invention of inventions. A hundred years ago a young man observing the slow and painful process of gathering wheat could set his mind to work and develop a reaper and binder. Today dozens of trained men, working together, find new uses for materials, combine things in new ways and are definitely looking for new things to invent. In America there are now 1700 research laboratories; 10 years ago there were only 200.

One result of their work is that half of the machinery now in use in American factories is out of date; that is to say, new machines have been built which can do the same work more efficiently, using less power or fewer men and giving a greater return on the investment. What is more, the new machinery will grow obsolete faster than the old, because research will go on. A generation ago a manufacturer might have imagined that his machinery would last 20 years and would write down 5 per cent a year for depreciation. Tomorrow he may have to write down 10 or 15 or even 20 per cent.

MacDowell Colony

Nor have we given them much nourishment. I think of this because this week several cities will celebrate the 25th anniversary of the founding of one of the few places in America where an artist gets freedom and leisure and general encouragement to do his work — the MacDowell Colony. Wednesday is scheduled for concerts in both New York and Chicago, at which works of Edward MacDowell will be played and other commemorative rites will be observed.

The MacDowell Colony is a colony only because it isn't a village or a city; it is not a place where any theory of art is promulgated; nor is it a permanent community as far as the artists are concerned. The buildings are there; Mrs. MacDowell, a miracle of energy and kindness, is there with a staff; but from year to year new people come and are allowed to write when they please or paint what they please or compose as they please.

I mentioned some time ago Howard Scott's example of the Insull dynamo which ran only six years, and then, in perfect condition, was retired and placed in a museum because it could no longer compete with new inventions; the bonds to pay for that dynamo had still some 80 years to run when the Insull smash occurred. If finance cannot keep up with invention bankruptcy seems as good a way out as any.

American Nobelman

This week an American scientist, one of the research workers who look for secrets and, as a byproduct, give to the world some of its most valuable inventions, receives the Nobel Prize. Dr. Irving Langmuir is the sixth American scientist to receive this award; the award for literature has come to us only once, and some people were scandalized because it went to Sinclair Lewis. Most people did not care. Mr. Lewis never gave us anything comparable to the gas-filled electric lamp. For that matter, most of us didn't know the lamps we use are filled with inert gas.

I propose no argument on the comparative merits of scientists in industry and artists outside of industry. Certainly the artists haven't helped manufacturers with new ideas, so they, at least are guiltless of bringing on the depression. On the other hand, they haven't done very much to exalt our souls during a hard time.

Keep Them Alive

The results have been gratifying. For the public it is good to know that several Pulitzer Prize winners and winners of Guggenheim scholarships have worked at the MacDowell Colony. Better still, the colony keeps open its doors to fresh talent—the moment talent has been shown it is eligible for the peace and health and inspiration of the place.

We have lots of things to do—we have to decide about beer and about taxes and about debts (Europe's and our own). But we can also afford to keep alive the arts—and the artists. They haven't harmed us yet.

Callous Congress Sheds Not a Beer

—By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER—

One month later the crippled goslings of Congress proved that we are not responsible for votes left over 30 days.

They out-quacked the wets. The hobbled ganders kept the 18th affidavit in the books and the flag flying on the 1933 budget.

But there's more than one way to clean a fish. The wets come right back again with a beer injunction demanding that Congress produce the body of the keg. Known in law as the corpus delicious.

Then they will celebrate the old English Christmas festival called bringing in the Yule lager.

In the illegal but satisfactory interim we will have to while away childhood's happy hours in the blind tigers.

Mr. Hoover mentioned none of these fermented details in his presidential message, which he probably wrote when he was expecting to be re-elected.

CHURCHES AID IDLE ACTORS

New York, Dec. 7 (INS)—Plans for a "road circuit" of church halls within a 100-mile radius of New York, in which unemployed actors will be given work in stock productions, were outlined today by Gerald Griffin, head of the Catholic Actors' Guild.

The plan calls for a start on the projects soon after the holidays, Griffin said, and already enough church halls have been engaged to provide work for at least one road company for three weeks. Only plays on the Catholic "white list" will be presented.

Bates Plans U.S. Jobs for 53,000 Convicts

Washington, Dec. 7 (AP)—The large number of prisoners—more than 53,000—that the federal government now maintains in idleness will soon be put to work under a plan of the Bureau of Prisons.

Sanford Bates, director, in his annual report today, said that as soon as a few remaining details were worked out, federal prisoners would be employed on various governmental projects for which funds were not available.

Music Hath Charms to Soothe Horses

Underhill and Luce

They Are Still Voting Dry

Congressman Charles L. Underhill of Somerville deliberately flew in the face of his constituents when he stubbornly voted against the Garner resolution for repeal of prohibition.

Mr. Underhill is a lame duck, fortunately for his constituents, but he has good eyes and good ears and there can be no excuse for saying he did not see or hear the sentiment of the several thousand people he is supposed to represent reliably in the halls of Congress.

His successor, Mr. Arthur D. Healey, a Democrat, offered himself to the people of that district on a platform which pledged outright repeal of prohibition and modification of the Volstead Act to permit legal beer and wine promptly. Mr. George H. Norton, the Republican candidate, also advocated both repeal and modification, because he, too, appreciated the sentiment of his people on this issue.

Moreover, every one of the many tests which have been held has proved conclusively that the people there are in accord with the platforms announced by Messrs. Healey and Norton. Underhill is out of step with the times. There can be no regret for his retirement because he has brazenly and defiantly set up his own wishes in this matter as superior to those of the people whose support he so frequently solicited in the past.

Mr. Luce of Waltham has quibbled. He now has assured us he will support some new and vague and, thus far, unproduced amendment for repeal of prohibition provided the language of it suits his refined notion of elegance. His district is wet and he knows it. Otherwise he would not have altered his dry attitude in the recent campaign and adopted one which his constituents assumed to be moist if not ringing wet. The point is that he has insufficient faith in the public to permit them to decide their own vital problems by having this matter of prohibition returned to the States for decision.

It's Time to Share

Much to Be Thankful For

Good signs even in bad times.

Close to $3,000,000 in dividends will be paid out to some 70,000 depositors of seven of our closed Massachusetts trust companies ere December 15.

Opportunely, so large a sum will be distributed among so many of our people on the eve of the Christmas holidays, when there should be universal rejoicing.

Amid the vast troubles of the world, when the sufferings consequent upon the financial debacle have been so poignant, we of New England have had some actual and real causes for relative happiness.

The disasters of the times have not fallen upon us so savagely and inclusively as upon other sections of the country.

Our financial fabric has remained firm on the whole because our bank failures have been insignificant as compared to other states of the Union.

Our resources and our spirit of generosity have enabled us better to provide relief for those who have been in distress.

Even now the payment of almost $3,000,000 in dividends to the 70,000 depositors will allay the suffering they have borne and we can appreciate our cause for gratitude when we contemplate a thousand banks in the Western States beyond the possibility of revival.

The holiday era is upon us, when peace and goodwill and contentment should reign.

As we give thanks for what we have, let us resolve also to share our resources with those among us to whom the gifts have not been bountiful.

The Culture Budget

For Busy Persons

Those of us who wish to improve our minds but never have time will be interested in the "culture budget" drawn up recently for busy persons by the American Art Dealers' Association.

To follow it you must:

1—Make one visit to a museum each month, two hours.
2—Visit six art exhibitions at a half hour each, three hours.
3—Hear two concerts or recitals, four hours.
4—Listen to four radio "classical" programs, four hours.
5—See two plays a month, five hours.
6—Read one outstanding, non-fiction work — biography, memoirs or history—every two months, five hours.
7—Read one important modern novel every two months, three hours.
8—Reread one classic every two months, three hours.
9—Read one volume of poetry every two months, one hour.

You might try it.

If you haven't the nine or ten dollars substitute free lectures and the public library for some of the other items.

It won't hurt you—no matter how much you know—and it is better than thinking about the depression. That gets you nowhere.

Salt Sea Keeps Us Young

Rev. Luther Barrett of Melrose reaches the fine age of 94 years in firm health. Last summer he went in swimming almost daily at Oak Bluffs, a practice of more than 30 years.

There is life and buoyancy in salt water. It is invigorating. Swimming not only exercises the legs and strengthens the abdominal muscles, it develops the shoulders and arms and inflates the lungs, the carburetor of your physical machine.

If you have children, teach them to swim and encourage them to engage in it often. And you can give thanks, as the Rev. Mr. Barrett does no doubt, that Nature has equipped your New England with the finest and most convenient bathing beaches to be found in the world.

Women Won't Do It

Mrs. Henry W. Peabody urges the women to go into deep mourning when beer and wine are legalized. This the women of this country will not do. Women with children are not going to weep when vice, corruption and hypocrisy pass out with prohibition. In the second place, the woman of today knows that her charm and beauty are usually enhanced by the gowns of brighter colors. And this is a consideration they cannot be expected to ignore. Even for the good Mrs. Peabody.

New York Day by Day

John Golden's Hit

NEW YORK, Dec. 7—For the majority of defenders of the lagging legitimate theater, it was happy news that the first smash hit of the season was sponsored by John Golden. His triumph, as usual, was a bull's eye. With a play as clean and fragrantly sharp as peppermint.

Golden, of all producers, has clung to what the Rialto considers shop-worn ideals. He does not believe the stage needs smut. Not only that, he justified this belief in an array of successes. Such as "Lightnin'," "Turn to the Right," "Seventh Heaven," "The First Year," etc.

His mind fails naturally into cleanliness, just as Dudley Malone's face falls into the chubbiness of a happy baby. He is not a prude. He likes a cigar, his highball, and a night out with the boys. He chuckles at the Rabelaisian tale, but he prefers it in the smoking room.

No one thinks of him as a reformer. He simply is a magician with the commonplace. If he needs a butler in a play, he uses his own butler and tells him to be himself. He is the sort of realist in the theater that Trollope was in English literature.

Time after time, he has demonstrated that the ordinary beats the exotic at its own game. Instead of obscure innuendoes, his plays are garlanded with light philosophy in quaint phrasing. He is one of untheatrical temperament, infatuated with the theater. The sort eternally puttering about a Great Neck garden.

In Golden's offering is the fatuously facetious Spring Byington, an actress too little seen but always making her role hum. She is the theater's most expert female flutterer, one of those arch ladies forever popping in at the wrong moment to blandly siphon the wrong remark and toss an entire household neck deep in confusion. Some day she will simper to stardom!

* * *

F. C. Kelly likely is the only scribbler to squeeze profits from the market during the past three hectic years. Five years ago as the result of orders on the subject from magazine editors, he became interested in speculation. He began some mild experimentations in the monied marts, and, like everybody, won. Furthermore, he anticipated the crash, protected himself and has kept on winning in a small way since.

* * *

On a 7th avenue corner, in the heart of the Roaring Forties, an all-night and all-day recreation room for weary boulevardiers has opened. It is called The Playground, and the large space is trinketed with innumerable diversions, played on tables. Such as hockey, bowling and baseball. Its busiest period is after 3 a. m., when various dice and poker games, floating from hotel to hotel, break up, and professional gamblers drop in for relaxation before breakfast and sleep.

* * *

Will Rogers was one high-salaried actor in America who did not invest a dollar in securities. There was a time he was tempted. It was while he was pinch-hitting for Fred Stone at the Globe. Eddie Cantor was on his fifth million and Jolson in the billions. He journeyed to Wall Street to talk it over with his friend, Bernard Baruch. Baruch told him to forget Wall Street and intimated that the future was not so rosy. Rogers, a prodigious saver, has every penny in real estate, mostly around Los Angeles. "At least," he says, "I have something to ride over."

* * *

In an East Side meander today—I can kiss myself into more sweet messes—I idled before a huddled, overcoated figure playing solitare on a box in front of his shop. Finally, I ventured: "The black or the red Queen!" He pushed over his box and leaped up in blazing wrath. And, in what I judged to be Yiddish, did he blow me out of the water! Then, his fat wife waddled out, also two neighbors from next door joined in. I don't know why it made them so mad, but, as usual, caught in such embarrassments, I skittered like a pony from his first saddle, ridiculously dusting off my hands and coughing off key.

Listen, World

By Elsie Robinson

Cheap Clothes

WE WERE TALKING about clothes. How things have changed in the last 10 years! All these new shops, with the pretty smart dresses so cheap. Two-for-15, though they look like a million dollars. And how lucky it is for the modern girl that she can have so many inexpensive dresses.

Elsie Robinson

"I'm not so sure it is lucky," said Ruth.

Ruth Evans is a popular hostess in a girls' hotel. She's young enough to be sympathetic, but she knows the inside stories which most older women don't hear.

"I think it's probably the most unfortunate thing that could have happened to girls" she went on, as we stared our surprise.

"No, I'm not going to preach against pretty clothes. You know I like them as much as anyone. But I think that all this cheap, snappy dressing is making more trouble than we realize yet.

"It isn't just that it tempts a girl into extravagance. They'll have to figure close enough later on. But it starts a girl off wrong. It helps a girl to appear to be something that she isn't, and it puts ideas into her head that are apt to spoil her whole life."

"But doesn't dressing nicely develop a girl's ambition and improve her standards?" someone asked.

Ruth laughed. "That depends on whether she has enough sense to have real ambition and standards. Some girls have. But the average youngster has only one desire—she wants to make a good marriage. And I honestly think these cheap dresses that 'make her look like a million' are spoiling her chances.

"You see, the average girl, if she's to be happy, should marry the average boy. They share the same background. They have the same interests. Their mating is a natural, and it used to come off as a matter of course. But it isn't a matter of course any more, and I think clothes are largely to blame. The movies, too, of course.

"When the average boy gets a job it means working in greasy coveralls in a garage, or in a butcher's apron behind some counter, or in a carpenter's overalls, just as his father did.

"But when the average girl gets a job, she doesn't go on living in the gingham which her mother wore. No; she steps, with her first pay check, into synthetic silk and imitation ermine, with a style copied from the latest Hollywood melodrama. Then somebody tells her that she looks just like Greta Garbo or Constance Bennett or Joan Crawford—and right there the trouble starts.

"Why should she live with a garage mechanic if she looks like Garbo? Why shouldn't something with a Barrymore profile go crazy over her, too?

"She doesn't stop to think that the mechanic she despises because of his greasy coveralls has as much intelligence as she has, and is probably making three times as good a record as a worker, nor does she ever have any doubts as to her own ability to live on a Barrymore plane if she should ever crash the gates. She knows that she looks the part, and that's all she wants to know.

"As a result, girls are turning up their noses at offers which they would once have accepted eagerly—and spending their lives in a feverish waiting for The Grand Chance that never comes.

"But, of course, it's a great thing for the little shops; for every pay day there's a new dress and accessories to match the dream. So trade goes———."

I wonder if that's true?

Is it working out that way with the girls of your acquaintance? Is the "Average Boy" in your set marrying the girl he went through Hi with—or is she strutting her pretty stuff in a psuedo-Parisian model and waiting for Clark Gable to come along?

Let's hear. It's important! Nations have gone to the bow-wows for lesser cause than this.

Just Folks

Destiny

None knows the purpose or the plan.
If it were in the power of man
To read his destiny aright
And settle it by force, he might,
O'verwhelmed by stronger ranks, despair,
Bewailing burdens he must bear.

But strength and wisdom hand in hand
Not always join to take command.
Nor is it possible to guess
Precisely failure and success.
What now seems good to look upon
May spell disaster later on.

This is the task of every man:
To serve the truth as best he can;
To know life's blend of smiles and tears
And wait the judgment of the years,
And, though, in darkness he may grope,
Never to part from faith or hope.

This is man's glory—he may be
Outnumbered twice ten times, yet he,
Clinging to truth, may work and wait
And ultimately join the great
And in God's own good time may wrest
From failure victory's shining crest.

The Repeal Vote; Einstein; Russia

By Claude G. Bowers

Author of "The Struggle for Democracy in America," "Founders of the Republic," "Jefferson and Democracy," "The Tragic Era" and other important works, now writing for the Boston Evening American

THE AFTERNOON THE WORD FLASHED from Washington that the Garner resolution for the repeal of the 18th Amendment had been defeated by a narrow margin of six votes it was amazing to note the expression of disillusionment and disappointment on the faces of people who had not analyzed the meaning of the vote. There was every reason for jubilation. Few of the disappointed and "disillusioned" recalled the vote in the same House a few months ago. Had they done so they would have been jubilant over the enormous accession to the ranks of the Liberals.

Few stopped to inquire regarding the personnel of the votes against repeal. Had they done so they would have found that 69 were men who have been repudiated by their constituents and on this very issue. And that within three months these 69 will trail back into the obscurity of private life to make way for 69 Liberals who will vote next time for the repeal. And only six votes lacking now—with all these discredited lame ducks voting against repeal!

National Prohibition Is Doomed

Most of these lameducks, as we predicted, voted against the mandate of the nation, in retaliation for their defeat and, thereby, justified their retirement. The major part of the vote against repeal came from the Republicans. With the House almost evenly divided between the two parties, 100 of the 144 votes against repeal were cast by the Republicans. Sixty-nine were cast by men the people have just thrown into the uttermost darkness of defeat. Of the 44 Democrats who voted against repeal, 11 will not sit in the next House.

New York is notoriously for repeal, and yet but four Republicans from that state voted for it; eight voted against it. Thus, as far as the politicians are concerned, the New York Republicans stood pat for prohibition. But Snell of New York, the Republican leader in the House, who will continue as leader in the new House which comes in three months hence, voted with Garner.

Thus the vote this week gives positive assurance that within three months we shall have a House which will vote overwhelmingly for repeal. National prohibition is doomed and damned now. The vote this week was the digging of the grave; the burial will come very soon.

The Victory Is Won

The Democrats in the recent campaign made no pledge to the people that a repeal resolution would be adopted before the party entered upon its mandate in March; it could not make such a pledge.

That makes all the more impressive the leadership assumed by the Democratic leader in pushing a repeal resolution under existing congressional conditions. Speaker Garner forced a repeal vote the very first day of the session. The resolution was offered from the floor by Representative Rainey the Democratic leader. All of which means that the public has the assurance that the party voted into power is determined to make good on its pledge to repeal the 18th amendment. It will make good on the modification of the Volstead Act to permit the manufacture and sale of beer with a tax upon it. That may come during the present session. If not now, in the spring, in an extra session, when the Democracy will have the power and the votes.

Thus there was no occasion for the long faces seen after the House vote on Monday. The victory is won. That vote, properly analyzed, proves it beyond all question.

Einstein and the State Department

Meanwhile, in its twilight, the State Department of the present administration has made America ridiculous by its incredible treatment of Albert Einstein, one of the most famous scientists in the world. This distinguished man had been invited to America to deliver some lectures. He had accepted. Some busy-bodies, hearing that he had an open mind on Communism, protested to the State Department against his admission as a visitor. Such a protest against the admission of such a personage should have been thrown into the waste basket.

But not so.

When Einstein applied to the American consulate in Berlin for a visa. When one of the most distinguished and respected men of the world appeared he was subjected to questioning. What 'activities" did he propose to indulge in when in America? Was he going to visit "friends of what?" What organization did he belong to? And finally the point was reached.

"What party do you belong to or sympathize with?"

"Are you a Communist or an anarchist?"

And then, being a self-respecting man, the great scientist gave the proper answer:

"I don't propose to answer such silly questions. I didn't ask to go to America. Your countrymen invited me; yes, begged me. If I am to enter your country as a suspect, I don't want to go at all. If you don't want to give me a visa, please say so, then I'll know where I stand. But don't ask me humiliating questions."

The visa will be granted; but Einstein has been given a kick by the representative of the American government which reflects no credit upon it.

No Reason to Fear the Russian Experiment

The time has come for America to assume a realist's attitude toward Russia. If the Russians want Communism that is their business and not ours; if we prefer democracy and our own governmental forms, that is our business, not theirs. And the recent election reduced to an absurdity the wild fear that our own people are Communistically inclined. Under the existing economic conditions, with millions jobless, and millions hungry, the Communist party in the recent election polled an absurdly small vote. We have no reason to fear the Russian experiment; not unless our own system completely collapses because of our failure to institute necessary reforms. We have just voted in favor of reforms.

Years have come and gone since the Soviet government was firmly established in Moscow. There is no sound reason, no reason other than a silly fear, for our failure to face realities and recognize the new Russia. The recognition of Russia no more means an acceptance of Communism than the recognition of Italy means an acceptance of Fascism. It merely means in both cases a recognition of realities.

Russia today offers one of the richest markets; she wants to buy from us; we have treated her as our special enemy and the result has been a great decrease in our trade with her. Meanwhile other nations, quite as hostile to Communism as we are, have accorded her recognition, and are getting the benefit of her trade.

The most effective weapon with which to fight Communism here is prosperity; prosperity depends on trade; tariffs have wrecked our trade with other nations; Russia wants to trade with us, and thus contribute to the restoration of prosperity here; and when Russia buys, she pays. This is the testimony of our industrialists.

Isn't it about time to end the silly business in which we have been engaged, to recognize Russia, and invite her trade?

AMERICAN'S HOME COLLEGE

TODAY'S QUESTION

What is (or was) the "Nitrogen Problem?"

This question will be repeated and answered tomorrow by Dr. Herbert R. Moody.

YESTERDAY'S QUESTION

By MYRON L. HOCH
Department of Economics

Saving takes place because men wish to realize future objectives. In many cases these objectives are specific, i. e., the saver wishes to make a trip around the world or buy an automobile or provide for old age. Banks are aware of this common motive for saving and make an appeal for deposits for the purpose of building up a fund for Christmas expenditures or travel or for a college education. In a great many cases the objective is not very definite.

Thus people save for the proverbial "rainy day," for security in old age, or merely for the sake of accumulating a store of money with not even a vague purpose in mind.

Interest is paid as a reward for savings. But it is probably true that some saving would take place if no interest were paid. If interest disappeared we should still expect people to make provision for future contingencies. The very rich would probably save if there were no interest return, because the act of saving involves little sacrifice on their part.

This question, however, is subject to debate. We must bear in mind that the habit of saving or the accumulating of capital is not an inborn characteristic of man and might conceivably be destroyed by the abolishment of interest.
